CONFERENCE ON TO MAKE DAWES PLAN EFFECTIVE

Americans Attend, But Not In Role of Full Delegates —Their Presence Has Telling Effect on Leaders, Giving Them More Confidence That Plans Will Be Agreed On.

(By The Associated Press.)

LONDON, July 16.—American co-operation for putting the Dawes plan into effect, to set Germany on her feet and stabilize the European economic situation, was emphasized at the opening here today of the Inter-Allied Reparation Conference with England's prime minister, Ramsey MacDonald and Edouard Herriot, head of the new French government, the leading figures.

At the conference table with the delegates sat two American representatives, Frank B. Kellogg, American ambassador to Great Britain, and Col. James A. Logan, Jr., American observer with the reparation commission.

Premier MacDonald in his opening remarks made especial reference to the presence of the two Americans, who, although not full delegates, indicated by their presence, he said, the good will of the United States and its co-operation in the effort to give effectiveness to the Dawes plan.

Ambassador Kellogg in reply declared the Americans were present in the same spirit of co-operation and helpfulness as the allied delegates, the American government and people believing that to make the Dawes plan effective would be the first notable step toward European stabilization.

After Premier MacDonald had been chosen chairman of the conference and committees appointed to work out the agenda, the conference adjourned until tomorrow.

(By The Associated Press.)

LONDON, July 16.—The Inter-Allied Conference for the purpose of making effective the Dawes plan for German reparations assembled at 11 o'clock today at the foreign office. American Ambassador Kellogg and Colonel James A. Logan, Jr., the American observer with the reparation commission, were present with four advisers and a number of secretaries.

Formally welcoming the delegates to the conference, Prime Minister MacDonald made especial reference to the presence of the Americans. He noted they were not present as full delegates, but he took their presence as indicating the good will and co-operation of the United States in the effort to make the Dawes plan effective.

Ambassador Kellogg, replying to Mr. MacDonald's welcome said the American government and people believed the adoption of the Dawes report would be the first great step toward stabilization of Europe.

The American delegates, Mr. Kellogg said, were not attending the conference with the same powers as the others at the conference table because the United States was not a party to the treaty of Versailles. However, the ambassador added, the Americans were present in the same spirit of cooperation and helpfulness. He paid warm tribute to the members of the Dawes committee and their work.

Opening the formal proceedings of the conference, Premier MacDonald briefly surveyed the reparations prob-

Body of Infant of Dead Mother Not Yet Found

(By The Associated Press.)

RICHMOND, July 16.—While funeral services were being held today for Mrs. John B. Christian, wife of a local merchandise broker who was found drowned in the old James River and Kanawha canal here yesterday, county and city police continued their search of the waterway for the body of her eight-months-old infant who the mother took with her, when she left here Monday. The canal has been drained and the officers centered their search today on many holes in the bottom in which they said the baby's body could be concealed.

Relatives and friends told the police Mrs. Christian suffered a nervous breakdown recently, following the illness of all of her four children. After the relatives statement, the police announced an inquest was not necessary.

Calary Picnic to Be Held Tomorrow

The annual picnic of Calvary Methodist Church and Sunday school will be held tomorrow, Crystal Lake having been chosen as the scene of the event. The members and children will be taken on motor trucks. All who plan to go are requested to be at the church by 10 o'clock when the trucks are scheduled to leave. The party will spend the day at the park and return late in the evening.

Special Train For Fruit Is Operated

In order to facilitate the movement of the Georgia peach crop to the eastern markets, the Southern Railway is now operating a fruit train in three sections daily. Each section consists of from twenty-five to thirty-five carloads of peaches, and is being run on Train No. 36's schedule from Atlanta, Ga., and Potomac Yards, Virginia. This schedule has been in operation for a week and everything has been moving along with dispatch and without any appreciable delays.

ADVERTISING ON UNIVERS'L BASIS AIM OF MEETING

Third Session Devoted to Discussion of Problems of Advertising.

(By The Associated Press.)

LONDON, July 16.—Serious discussion of specific problems of advertising today occupied the third day of the international advertising convention, which was devoted for the most part to departmental conferences.

Leaders of the convention expressed the opinion that the conferences this year would form the basis for an immediate opening for advertising on a universal scale and will allow the U. S. delegates to bring to bear upon the delegates upon nations not yet highly developed along advertising lines, the modern and advanced conception of the industry prevailing in the United States. Because of the rapid growth of newer interests in the departmental meetings, especially because of the opportunity they afforded for discussion of problems of advertising on an international basis, the present convention was th most important as it convened, it was declared.

One of the most important departmental meetings that of business research, which includes the vast problem of industrial and commercial advertising, was addressed by Gordon Selfridge, the American, who first introduced to London the idea of department store advertising on a large scale. Speaking on research in merchandising, Mr. Selfridge said the problem of finding material to advertise was a great one. He had found that the manner of presenting goods, especially to a skeptical public such as that of London, required the need of advertising of the highest type. He thought there was a virgin field before advertisers on this subject of research.

Mr. Selfridge was followed by Harry Dwight Smith of Cleveland, and Ray Vance, of New York.

The newspaper executives heard Cornelius Vanderbilt on the subject of the tabloid newspaper and L. W. Clayborn of Milwaukee.

Malcolm Muir, of New York speaking before the Industrial Advertisers, said that the industrial markets in the United States still offered the widest opportunity to the advertisers but that it was the international market in which the manufacture was most interested and which advertisers needed most to develop.

Movement to Get D. and W. Railway to Extend Its Line

A movement is on foot for the Danville & Western Railway to extend its line from Leaksville to Madison, where it will connect with the Atlantic & Yadkin Railway. The distance from Leaksville to Madison is only fifteen miles, and this extension will furnish a thru line from Danville to Greensboro. It will open up an important section of Rockingham county, N. C., that is now without the benefit of railroad facilities. The cities of Danville and Greensboro located at each end of the proposed line would naturally be interested in the extension: while Roanoke and Winston-Salem are known to already be interested in the project.

A committee of seven of the representative business men of Leaksville have been designated to present the matter to the Chamber of Commerce and other organizations in the cities of Danville, Greensboro, Winston-Salem, and Roanoke. They will also endeavor to secure the active cooperation of the citizens of Madison, who are in favor of the proposed line.

This is an exclusive new pose of Wilhelm, once kaiser and long since a mere "resident of Doorn," taken in the garden with his dog.

First Issue of Greater Danville Is Off the Press

The initial number of "Greater Danville," a monthly publication issued by the Danville Chamber of Commerce, has come from the press and is now ready for distribution, and while it is an unpretentious four-page paper of modest size, it contains a number of splendid articles on timely topics that should be of interest to every member of the organization. It is an acknowledged fact that there is no better mediu mthru which to bring the members of any organization into closer touch with each other and to promote the spirit of co-operation and team work that is so necessary to the promotion of any project, than printer's ink judiciously spread on a printed page. Then if the initial number of "Greater Danville" is a fair sample of what the publication is to be, there is no reason why it should not aid materially in the creation of a "Greater Danville." Edward R. Diggs is the managing editor and Mrs. P. G. Giles is the assistant editor of the publication. The editorials are splendidly written, and are along line of vital interest to the citizens of Danville. The contributions were sent in by the members of the Danville Chamber of Commerce. The August number will be a special American Legion number.

An article featuring the slogan of Danville, and written by G. F. Edwards is especially appropriate and pleasure is taken in quoting the article in its entirety:

"Danville Does Things."

"The slogan, 'Danville Does Things,' is an admirable one, provided the things done are constructive and intelligent, but woe to the city if they are not. What does the slogan mean to the citizens of Danville? Does it inspire them with the ambition to work for 'Greater Danville?' Does it give them a vision of the Danville of the future? Does this vision of Danville loom up large on the horizon of the future as a great city supplying the needs of a broad agricultural and industrial section? Does this vision show our city as a great industrial center? Let's answer these questions in the affirmative; go to work with vim, vigor and vitality, to make ours a live, hustling city of commerce and trade. And, lest we forget, why not add one word to the slogan? Have it read: 'Danville Does Things Constructively.'—G. F. Edwards."

MANY PROMINENT MEN ON PROGRAM AS SPEAKERS AT LEGION CONVENTION HERE

Drive For Funds to Entertain Convention Comes to Close With $4,100 Subscribed With Full Quota Expected to Be Reached Today With Late Reports to Come in.

The whirlwind drive for legion funds came to an end yesterday evening with the amount subscribed totalling $4,100, leaving a balance of $900 to complete the budget of $5,000. In view of the fact that several of the committees are yet to be heard from, there is little doubt but that the entire amount will be in hand when all of the reports are in.

It is particularly gratifying to note that the pledges were exceptionally small, which means that the number of subscribers to the fund instead of being a few big business men, consists of about 1,500 of the rank and file of the Danville citizens. The campaign was wound up this morning with gratifying reports from all of the committee captains and the balance of the fund is expected to come in without any further effort on the part of the committees.

Every one who did not pay cash with their pledges are urged to cover them with checks at the earliest possible moment, in order to facilitate the work of the convention committees.

It is requested that all bills be sent to Post Commander, Waverly H. Cousins, who will handle them in connection with C. L. Booth, treasurer. This is done because Mr. Cousins is entirely familiar with the budget, and is in position to handle them in a more economical manner.

The list of speakers who have been secured to address the convention include:

General John J. Pershing, past national commander; Alvin Owsley (American Legion), past national president; Dr. Kate Waller Barrett, (Auxiliary); Congressman George C. Peery, Ninth Virginia District; Congressman Thomas W. Harrison, Seventh Virginia District; Governor E. Lee Trinkle, John Thomas Taylor, director of American legislative committee on adjusted compensation; Dr. Douglas S. Freeman, leading editorial writer; Major Harry Webb Farrington, poet, athletic director and brilliant speaker.

Hon. Joseph Daniels, former secretary of the navy, has been invited to deliver an address, but a definite reply has not yet been received.

WOMAN TELLS OF SEEING HIM IN CAR WITH 2 MEN

Was Apparently Unconscious or Dead—Bundle Later Taken Into Woods

(By The Associated Press.)

NORFOLK, Va., July 16—"That's the man," said Mrs. Edward Allen, of Norfolk, today, when shown a picture of Major Samuel H. McLeary, C. A. C., who disappeared two weeks ago.

Mrs. Allen positively identified the man she saw near Raleigh, N. C., on July 2 as Major McLeary. He was then in an automobile not far from Enfield, she said. The white man was holding him in the back seat. A negro was driving the car.

Afterward she saw the white man and the negro carry a large bundle into the woods on a detour from the Raleigh-Columbia highway, Mrs. Allen said. At this time she saw nothing of Major McLeary.

Mrs. Allen said she was able to state positively that the man in the car when she first saw it was Major McLeary, and that he was nowhere in sight when the other two men later carried the bundle into the woods.

"I could pick him out from among a dozen men now," said Mrs. Allen, looking at the picture. "I remember distinctly the firm set of his jaw and the shape of the nose. He was laying back in the rear seat of the car. I couldn't positively say whether he was dazed or already dead. The white man sitting beside him was holding him up in the seat."

Major McLeary at that time, according to Mrs. Allen, was wearing his army cap and was in his shirtsleeves.

Mrs. Allen was en route to Norfolk from Florida in a car with her son and two smaller children.

(By The Associated Press)

ASHEVILLE, N. C., July 16.—Although reports that Major Samuel H. McLeary, missing United States army officer, has been seen in various parts of North Carolina, persist, authorities and friends of the major here today continued firm in their belief that some definite clue as to his whereabouts will be found in the mountains.

When the search of the thickety region near Canton was ended last night by darkness, nothing definite had been learned of the missing man, beyond the discovery of his automobile, papers and clothing made on Sunday. Searchers admitted that they had gained little new information.

J. S. Ainsworth, of Texas, a friend of Major McLeary, who arrived here Monday night, was the leader in yesterday's search.

SEARCH ALL ROADS

(By The Associated Press.)

RALEIGH, N. C., July 16.—Captain A. R. Ives, U. S. Army, stationed with the North Carolina National Guard, and Captain J. A. Code, Norfolk, left today for Columbia, S. C., by way of Holly Springs, to search all routes for Major Samuel H. McLeary, missing U. S. Army officer. They announced that they will search all routes between here and Fort Moultrie near Charleston, S. C., for which Major McLeary was en route when he was last seen here on July 2.

The two officers yesterday made inquiries at all filling stations between Raleigh and Sanford on the Raleigh-Columbia road. At Sanford they reported finding a filling station attendant who had seen an army officer, answering the description of the missing major on July 5, but the searchers said that they did not believe it could have been Major McLeary because of the date.

All efforts so far exerted by the police of this city and the adjutant-general's department of the state of North Carolina in the search for Major McLeary have proved fruitless.

The chief of police here received a letter from the inspector of detectives in Norfolk, enclosing a letter from a Mrs. Edward Allen, stating that while en route from Raleigh to Columbia, S. C., on or about July 1, or 2, she was passed by another automobile in which there were three men, two white and one negro. One of the white men, she said, was dressed in an uniform. She also states that the later she passed the same automobile about two stations away from Raleigh and saw two men wrap something up in a canvass and carry it into a woods.

Officers yesterday searched the woods near Apex and Cary and questioned all persons in the vicinity but found no trace of McLeary.

THREE SUSPECTS RELEASED

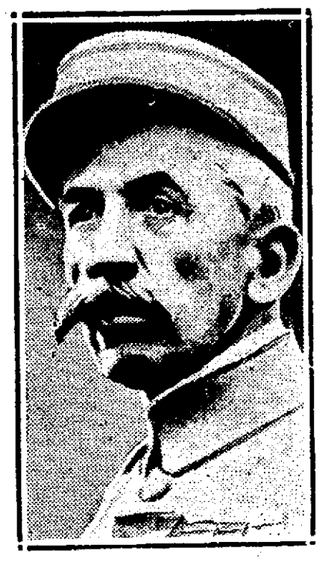

(By The Associated Press)

CANTON, N. C., July 16.—Three men arrested last night and early today as suspects in connection with the disappearance of Major Samuel H. McLeary, U. S. army officer, were released this morning when Mrs Luther Hall failed to identify either as the man who drove the missing officer's automobile into the thickety section three miles from here and abandoned it. Two of the men were strangers and said they were en route to Tennessee while the third was an employe of the Champion Fibre Company here.

Major McLeary's car was driven to this section on July 3rd by two men

RECONSTRUCTOR

General Lyautey, in charge of the French troops in Morocco, is doing a lot more than subduing warring natives. He is putting the country on the map in a business way. The general is supervising the erection of huge dams and irrigation systems, encouraging agriculture, fostering mining and pottery-making, and safeguarding Morocco's rich petroleum deposits.

Rotarians Dine at Camp Ro-Li-Ki

Twenty-five members of the local Rotary Club motored out to Camp Ro-Li-Ki yesterday afternoon to participate in an banquet or chicken dinner, and to enjoy the evening with the twenty boys now encamped there. Following the dinner, the Rotarians amused themselves by pitching horse shoes and taking part in other games and sports. Some special musical numbers were rendered by the boys and the Rotarians, and a number of short talks were made by the visitors. They also had the privilege of attending the council ring service that is held by the boys every evening. However, some of them ate too much dinner and were unable to enter the council room via the secret passage and had to gain admission thru other channels. The visiting Rotarians all expressed themselves as having enjoyed the occasion immensely.

The boys who are now encamped at Ro-Li-Ki will come in next Friday, when this ten day period will be up. A rest of ten days will be taken in order to give the workers of the dam, which was damaged in a recent heavy rain, an opportunity to make the necessary repairs. The next ten period will begin on August 1.

ANOTHER LEG OF JOURNEY 'ROUND WORLD IS MADE

Eventful Flight Across Channel From Paris Made Today in Little Over Three Hours—Greeted by Officials and Wife of Aviator McLauren, Also on Flight Around World in Opposite Direction.

(By The Associated Press.)

CROYDON, Eng., July 16—The American Army airmen on their world flight landed here at 2:08 o'clock this afternoon.

The three machines taxied easily into the Croydon airdrome after an uneventful flight across the channel from Paris. Lieut. Lowell H. Smith, the flight commander, was the first to land and one of the first to greet the American airmen was Mrs. Stuart MacLaren, wife of the British world flier, who asked news of her husband, now in the far east.

The aviators made the distance between Lebourget and Croydon, estimated at 225 miles, in 3 hours and three minutes.

"I am sorry we missed him, but am glad we could help him," Lieut. Smith replied to Mrs. MacLaren, re-which the American expeditionary forces were able to supply the British aviator in India last month.

Immediately following the flagship, "Chicago," in which Lieut. Leslie P. Arnold, accompanied Lieutenant Smith, were Lieut. Eric Nelson and Lieut. John Harding, Jr., in the "New Orleans," and Lieut. Leigh Wade and Sergeant A. M. Ogden in the "Boston."

As the three planes swept up the field, the crowd, which had gradually increased from a score or so to several hundred, burst into loud applause and hurried to clasp the hands of the airmen and have them write something in autograph albums, on the backs of envelopes or anything else handy.

"We are all well and feeling fine," Lieut. Smith said.

ENJOYED STAY IN PARIS

(By The Associated Press.)

LE BOURGET, Fance, July 16.—The American army round-the-world fliers hopped off from the airdrome here at 11:05 o'clock this morning for England.

A French commercial air liner accompanied the three United States air planes to point out the way to the Channel. They were followed by a French military escort of three planes which will take them to the coast.

On the British side of the channel another air escort awaits them.

The world girdlers have fairly good weather for their farewell to France. There was a slight breeze and a hazy sky, but official reports were for satisfactory flying conditions.

The American fliers found life so pleasant in Paris that they decided to remain in the vicinity of the bright lights until the last moment, only allowing themselves sufficient time to arrive in London and keep a luncheon engagement with the British air officials.

President Doumergue was all prepared to pin the legion of honor to the breasts of the deloubtable American when he received them at the Elysee Palace. It was said, however, that the executive was informed at the last moment that American army regulations require that approval for the bestowal of foreign decorations be first obtained from Washington.

This will be asked for immediately and the pleasant duty of decorating the air heroes will be delegated to the French ambassador at the American capitol.

COOLIDGE WILL SPEND SUMMER AT WHITE HOUSE

Does Not Plan to Leave Washington For Any Purpose Before September

(By The Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, July 16.—President Coolidge will spend the remainder of the summer in Washington unless something unforeseen develops.

Mr. Coolidge declared against establishment of a "Summer White House" before the advent of hot weather but at the same time those who have had more experience with Washington summers than the chief executive, predicted he would not hold to that resolution.

The summer so far has been cool—that is—cool for Washington—and the president has told friends he and Mrs. Coolidge have found the White House quite comfortable and have made no plans other than to remain there.

Week-end trips on the Mayflower afford more real rest in the president's open, than would a stay of several weeks outside the capitol. Inasmuch as Mr. Coolidge is not to be formally notified of his selection as the Republican presidtntial nominee until August 14, it is not probable he will leave Washington for any purpose before the first of September.

WILBUR TO INSPECT POST AT QUANTICO

(By The Associated Press.)

PRETTY TOBACCO FIELD ATTRACTS ATTENTION ON LOWER CRAGHEAD STREET

The Origin of Tobacco, the Source of Supply, the Process of Producing and Means of Placing Product on Market Outlined.

In the early history of Virginia the early settlers became so much interested in the cultivation of tobacco at one time that it was grown in the streets of Jamestown. So much attention was given to the cultivation of the weed that the people neglected to plant crops of corn and other produce to insure the lives of the colony, and laws had to be passed regulating the number acres that could be planted in tobacco. Jamestown hasn't got anything on the city of Danville, for on Craghead street at the upper end of the Southern freight station is to be seen a splendid patch of tobacco that is thriving and growing right along.

The Origin of Tobacco

The sight of this tobacco growing along by the side of one of the principal streets of Danville recalls the origin of the product that has had such an influence on the market of the Old Dominion state. When the early English settlers came to America and established the first permanent settlement at Jamestown in 1607, they fully expected to find the new country rich in gold mines and that they would soon be able to accumulate fabulous fortunes by digging the gold out of the ground. Disappointed in this they soon learned the art of cultivating the "fragrant weed" as it was then called, from the Indians. When John Rolfe conceived the idea of placing it on the market in England, the green tobacco turned to yellow gold, for the growers could exchange it for gold and for almost anything they wished for. Then when the Virginia bachelors became tired of living alone, ship loads of pretty maidens were brought over from England and given to them in exchange for tobacco. The exchange value was first fixed at 100 pounds, but the demand for wives soon caused an advance to 150 pounds of tobacco.

The Source of Supply

Practically all of the world's supply of tobacco is grown in the states of Virginia, North and South Carolina, Kentucky and Pennsylvania. The highest grade of tobacco is grown in the bright belt of Virginia and western North Carolina; while the tobacco grown in eastern North Carolina, South Carolina, Kentucky and Pennsylvania is principally used for coloring and blending. Wilson, North Carolina, is the largest loose-leaf tobacco market in the world at the present time, and Richmond, Virginia, and Winston-Salem, North Carolina, rank among the leading manufacturing centers of the south.

The Process of Producing Tobacco.

The tobacco seed are sown in beds of loose earth which has been highly fertilized, in the month of February. When the plants begin to come out of the ground, the beds are covered with plant bed canvas, to protect the tender plants from the cold and the frost. The fields are thoroughly plowed and laid off in rows; the fertilizer being placed in the drill by guano distributers, and the plants are transferred from the beds to the fields the latter part of May and the first of June. The fields are then cultivated until the latter part of July, and the plants are usually matured enough for cutting by the middle of August. The stem of the plants are split and the plants are strung on small sticks and hung up on racks in the tobacco barns for the curing process, which ordinarily requires from three to four days.

Placing Tobacco on the Market.

When the curing process finished, the tobacco is removed from the barns and the leaves are stripped from the stalks and graded and tied in small bundles and transported to the warehouses to be sold. There are now two systems of selling tobacco; one method is to sell it at auction direct to the buyers and the other method is to sell it thru the Co-Operative Tobacco Growers' Association, whose selling organization disposes of the tobacco for the members of the association. After the tobacco has been sold, the buyers then take it to their warehouses, where it is stemmed and redried and placed in large wooden casks. It is then ready for the domestic and foreign markets. Several million pounds of tobacco is manufactured every year, and there is an ever increasing demand for the manufactured goods, more especially for cigarettes, which demand was occasioned by the young men acquiring the habit while serving in the army during the World War. A large number of ladies, who a few years ago would not have dared to smoke cigarette, have decreed that it is perfectly right and proper for them to indulge in the dainty gold-tipped cigarettes.

SHOOTS LOVER TO PUT AN END TO HIS AGONY

Man, Dying, Begs That He Be Shot, and Fiance Puts Bullet in His Head.

(By The Associated Press.)

PARIS, July 16—Slowly dying from an incurable malady, Jan Zosnowski, a well known Polish writer, repeatedly begged friends and attendants at the sanitarium at Valle Juif to put an end to his suffering. Today his fiancee, Mlle. Stanislawa Unicuska, visited him and was so overcome at the plight of his agony that she could not resist his pitiable pleadings. She shot him in the head and he is not expected to recover.

Following the shooting, Mlle. Unicuska collapsed and officers who were summoned to make the arrest, left her in the care of the sanitarium. She is only 22 years old and noted for her beauty. She had been a constant visitor to her fiance's sick room.

Zosnowski, a talented writer, is 35 years old. He came from Warsaw to Paris to seek medical advice. The best French surgeons operated on him twice but were unable to give him relief.

TO PREACH TOMORROW.

Elder J. T. Jackson will preach at Elder J. R. Wilson's residence on 105 James street, Thursday night at 8 o'clock.

RADIO NOTES

GROUND AERIAL FREE END

A new preventive against local interference from power lines and electrical machinery has been devised by a French amateur.

He grounded the free end of the aerial.

His method is to connect a heavy wire to that end and bring it direct to the ground. The heavier the wire the better, to reduce resistance to a minimum.

The other end of the antenna is brought to the receiver and thence to the ground as usual.

HIGHER SELECTIVITY

In a case of too broad tuning, try adding a few turns to the primary of the aerial inductance. This often results in sharper tuning.

TO COVER THE WORLD

International radio concerts are being prepraed by Station KDKA, Pittsburg. An evening will be devoted to each nation and the concert will be broadcast in that nation's language, besides English.

ON FLANDERS FARMS

Farmers in Belgium are being more and more equipped with radio receiving sets, reports an observer. In cities, half the houses have sets. Only about half pay the State tax of 20 francs for each installation.

200 MILES ON CRYSTALS

Crystal set users in England may be able to hear the new high-power station at Chelmsford up to 200 miles away, say officials of the British Broadcasting company. The new station will try to reach across the ocean, operating on 1,600 meters with a power of 25 kilowatts.

SPOTTING BY RADIO

Radio spotting by army airplanes proved such a success at recent artillery practice in the Philippines that closer co-operation by this means is planned between artillery and aviation officers. Not a single radio failure was reported.

WATCH FOR "BEATS"

If you hear a constant pitch whistle while receiving, some broadcasting station, generally nearby is not transmitting on its assigned wavelength. This whistle or "beat" is produced by the carrier waves of two broadcasting stations. Waves are assigned far enough apart to avoid this.

Solicitors Raise $4,100 In Drive

The second day of the Chamber of Commerce canvass to subscribe $5,000 as a fund for the entertainment of the Virginia convention of the American Legion in this city, August 26th to 27th, inclusive, closed yesterday with the figure on the total contributed or subscribed advanced to $4,100. These figures were attained on the basis of reports from seven of the eleven canvassing teams, four being yet unreported. It is estimated that the figures from the unreported committees, together with contributions not yet turned in, will carry the total at least $300 higher, thus, leaving from $500 to $600 yet to be raised.

Today's canvass will doubtless carry the movement over the goal. The movement has received practically no subscriptions from any organized body or club or organization, the great majority of the contributions being in sums of $1, $2 and $3, with an occasional $5 and a few slightly larger. While exact figures are not yet available, the $4,100 subscribed probably represents small sums donated by something like 1,500 or more people. These significant facts and figures indicate an almost universal interest in the movement and, particularly in the cause for which the found is benig raised. It is not unlikely that the directors of the chamber will themselves substantially augment their contributions if necessary to assure the complete success of the movement. Only a very few people asked to contribute have flatly declined to do so, although many are probably not in a position to contribute funds at this time.

It is the confident hope of the chamber that it will be able to wind up the canvass today, but it does not desire to do this without subscribing the whole amount sought.

The field committee headed by Herbert M. Menkel of the Hotel Burton made the high score yesterday in point of the amount turned in, and he was complimented and congratulated on the good work of his committee.

The secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, Mr. E. R. Digges, said last night that the chamber was thoroughly appreciative of the assistance rendered by the press in the matter of the helpful publicity given to the canvass, without which he did not believe the results could have been attained. Post Commander Waverley H. Cousins and his associates in the Legion have also rendered helpful and valuable service.

Many persons engaged in the tobacco industry in its various phases are absent from the city this week, and the chamber hopes to receive valuable assistance from them on their return.

TONIGHT LAST TO FILL OUT BONUS BLANKS

Tonight will be the last evening this week that the American Legion will have men at Memorial Mansion to assist ex-service men in filling out their "bonus" blanks. This announcement is made owing to the slowing up of men calling for assistance, and if it develops later that there is need of more service from the Legion men, the Danville post will be ready to press another corps of workers into service and proper notice will be given to the veterans. Meantime those who have not yet secured the application blanks can get them at the office of the post adjutant, Thomas A. Fox, Jr., at T. A. Fox & Co.'s or from the service officer, Dr. G. W. Johnson at his office in the Arcade building. Men at Schoolfield can get the blanks at Park Place Pharmacy, and Legionnaire Welch Dyer will make appointments to meet them at the Schoolfield Y. M. C. A. at night, to assist in filling them out.

Members of the Legion are urged to attend the meeting at Rodgers' park Friday night—swimming, dancing, and ice cold watermelons. The meeting will be in charge of the past post commanders, and the principal business will be the election of delegates to represent Danville post on the floor of the State convention to be held here next month.

SNATCH-THIEF OUTFOOTS PURSUERS IN A CHASE

Yesterday afternoon about three o'clock, a negro youth, apparently about 15 years old, entered the shop of I. Masloff, tailor and clothing dealer, on Patton street and asked the proprietor for a job. While Mr. Masloff's back was turned for a moment, the boy grabbed a shirt and a pair of trousers and ran out of the place. An alarm of "Stop, thief" was promptly given and a chase ensued which extended to Main street, Market and Patton streets and then into Bridge street. A police officer entered the pursuit, but the thief succeeded in distancing his pursuers sufficiently to elude them.

MAN DENIES HE IS DEAD.

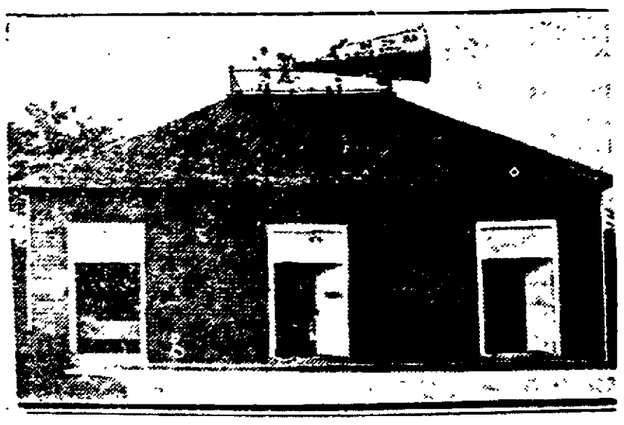

HIGH POINT, N. C., July 15.—Though he was supposed to have been dead for more than five hours, Henry Brown, 21, of Winston-Salem, walked into police headquarters here last night and told Chief W. L. Blackwelder that he was not dead and that he was looking for his wife who had been missing for several days.

Mrs. Mary Brown, the man's mother, had received a telegram early in the evening telling her that Brown had been killed in an automobile accident and she requested that his body be sent to Winston-Salem. The search had been started for Brown's dead body when he presented his own body in the living to the police station.

Simple One-Floor Home

Courtesy, Curtis Companies, Clinton, Ia.

FRONT VIEW AND PLAN OF ONE-FLOOR HOUSE

Perhaps you are tired of the common variety of bungalows, yet would like a home of five rooms or so, on one floor, in a design of architectural merit.

Such is this charming English cottage, its simplicity a welcome relief from the restless, overdone little houses that line the streets. The simple roof ends in a neat rake mold. Casement windows and chimney pots are characteristic features. Color is introduced in the stained shingle roof the brick-edged terraces and the exterior woodwork, as well as in the vines and shrubs that will later add their bit.

The sheltered formal entrance is a vestibule in itself, but there is an entrance hall also. The sleeping quarters are well isolated from the daytime rooms. The arrangement of roome is unusual and effective.

One could hardly plan a more interesting living room. It has oak ceiling beams to increase its cozy homeliness. Casement windows on two sides and a glazed door opening to the living porch fill the room with sunshine and fresh anr.

The rectangular shape of the room makes it easy to furnish attractively. A built-in bookcase is already provided.

The kitchen, directly at the rear of the living room, opens into both living room and dining room. Window and door openings on opposite sides of the kitchen insure the best supply of air.

The dining room is the center of the plan. A built-in buffet is a useful and ornamental feature, and like the rest of the woodwork in the house, is a standard stock design.

At the right end of the house the two bedrooms and bath are grouped. With casements on two sides of each, permitting the full use of the openings, these rooms become really sleeping porches. Clothes closets, tray case and linen case delight the housewife's heart. A coat closet in the front hall is another much-desired feature.

In the average community, this home could be built for about $5360, figured at 27 cents a cubic foot.

J. OLIVER STONE IS DEAD AFTER 8 YEARS' ILLNESS

J. Oliver Stone died on Sunday night at his residence at Boxwood, Va., at the age of 76. Mr Stone was paralyzed eight years ago but his general health otherwise remained good until he became ill several days ago. He saw service in the Civil war and was well known throughout Virginia and North Carolina.

Mr. Stone was twice married. His first wife was Miss Elizabeth Harris, who died twenty-nine years ago. He was afterward married to Miss Ada Turner, of Figsboro, Va., who with their four daughters survives him. They are Mrs. W. R. Bullington, of Danville; Mrs. Thomas Lewis, of Harrisonburg, Va.; Mrs. John Baughn, of New Jersey, and Mrs. Will Richardson, of Martinsville, Va., and one son, R. B. Stone, of Asheville, N. C.

Funeral services were conducted at the home at 11 o'clock yesterday morning by the Baptist pastor at Axton, and interment was made in the family burial ground.

COAST ARTILLERY BAND PREPARING FOR CAMP

The 246th Coast Artillery band yesterday had a parade and practice movement and maneuvers on the parade ground of the Danville Military Institute early yesterday evening, in preparation for the appearance and participation of the band in the coast artillery encampment at Fort Monroe August 1st to 15th, which the Danville Grays company of coast artillery will also attend. The band had 21 musicians out last evening taking part in the drill and maneuvers, and the bandsmen developed considerable proficiency in "watching their steps." Warrant Officer Albert A. Hall was in command.

The band will probably carry its full complement of 31 men on its trip to Fort Monroe, and the men generally are looking forward with pleasant anticipations to the trip and the fortnight spent in camp on the beautiful fort reservation.

POLICE SIGNAL SYSTEM IS BADLY NEEDED HERE

The police department of this city are considerably handicapped by the lack of any means or system of communicating with headquarters, except by means of telephones at the all-night or nearly all-night restaurants and lunchrooms. In most other cities, police telephone systems are installed, so that patrolmen on their beats can be reached from headquarters easily, and they themselves may call headquarters at frequent intervals. In other days, the officers carried a special type of whistle with which they could call assistance when needed, but these are now relics of the past. At other times patrolmen were armed with wooden billets or clubs, with which they could rap the pavement at night and in this crude way have available a signal system of their own. In the quiet of night and early morning, the sharp rap of one of these tough locust clubs could be heard for blocks away.

The efficiency of the police service would be greatly promoted by the adoption of a police telegraph or telephone or signal system of some kind such as are installed in all the larger and in some of the progressive small cities.

PASSENGERS THREATEN WIRELESS OPERATOR

NEW YORK, July 14.—Passengers on the steamship Pulio today there were 437—were wild with excitement as the vessel entered the lower bay. Every one was on deck, waiting to see the skyline of New York, as the ship reached quarantine.

They expected to see a diminished skyline, with the Woolworth and Municipal buildings and a few other large structures missing, for a radio report they had received told how an earthquake had wrecked the city and left it almost completely demonished and made tens of thousands homeless.

Pleasure and surprise were registered that the skyline had remained constant. It was explained that the radio operator, an Italian, who understands no English, had picked up a radio message from a news broadcasting station and posted the dire news on bulletin board.

Investigation disclosed that the cause of the rumor was the story appearing in morning newspapers, from Philadelphia, in which David Todd, former professor of astronomy at Amherst, prophesied an earthquake eventually would shake New York, due to the overlapping of certain huge strata of rocks.

There was considerable excitement on the liner when the report was posted and the fifty saloon passengers began to storm the radio operator with messages. Officers had to protect him when they learned of his mistake, as several excited passengers threatened to mob him.

HUNT'S DAILY LETTER

By HARRY B. HUNT

NEW YORK, July 16.—The uncertainties of politics were never better demonstrated than in the closing sessions of the Democratic convention, where the pent-up votes of a thousand restless delegates, breaking the deadlock that had held them back through nine days of balloting, rushed forth like flood waters when a dam has burst and, catching Davis and Bryan on the crest of the waves, swept them swiftly to the nomination.

Delegates who were swept off their feet on the final day and threw their ballots into the Davis-Bryan whirlpool, make no apologies for their actions.

"What else could we do?" they ask. "We had to do something. And, after all, isn't it a good ticket?"

• • •

No phase of the convention activities were more interesting than those which immediately followed the nomination of Davis for the top of the ticket.

The vice-presidential sentiment could not be crystallized until after the presidential selection had been made. For everybody conceded the second place on the ticket, for political reasons, would have to go to some one who would help "balance the ticket."

With an eastern man for president, a western man must be chosen. The ticket mustn't be sectional.

Davis' nomination, therefore, at once eliminated Silzer of New Jersey, Copeland of New York and Ritchie of Maryland as real contenders. Who could the west offer that would be of real help?

The first man the convention turned to was Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana, chairman of the convention, who had directed the senatorial investigation into the Sinclair-Fall-Doheny oil leases.

Walsh could have had the nomination in a minute. In fact, he peremptorily adjourned the convention, following the nomination of Davis, without putting the question, in order to head off a move to nominate him to second place by acclamation.

Walsh then explained to party leaders that it would be most unwise to place him on the presidential ticket. He is up for re-election to the Senate this fall, and is sure of sweeping his State for that office.

But the fate of the Democratic presidential ticket is not so certain. He would be much more valuable to the party, he explained, as a real senator than as a problematical vice president.

In deference to his wishes—in fact to his demand—Walsh was reluctantly passed by.

• • •

Second choice of the large majority of delegates from the western field, to which the choice was limited, was Edwin Meredith of Iowa.

Meredith lives in the center of the great agricultural region which is the seat of the cramps which threaten to bring on political convulsions this fall. The trouble has been diagnosed out there as too much Wall street.

Meredith, as publisher of farm periodicals and in close touch with agricultural thought and sentiment, realized that a lot of explaining would have to be done to convince the midwest that a New York attorney, with his office on Wall street just around the corner from Wall, and with J. P. Morgan as his client, is not to a considerable degree influenced by, if not representative of, Wall street.

So Meredith, likewise, refused the honor. Thereby setting a new record for the Democrats.

• • •

One Republican—Lowden—refused the G. O. P. vice presidential place. Two Democrats—Walsh and Meredith—refused it from the Democrats.

A Plea to Men
Please Keep Your Hair.
By Edna Wallace Hopper

You men admire luxuriant hair, thick and lustrous, healthy, clean. And so do we, dear sirs. Then, why will you, through sheer neglect, let your hair disappear.

My hair is finer than 40 years ago. It grows thicker every year. I have never known falling hair of dandruff, and never a touch of gray. Just because I searched the world for the best hair helps men know. And I had them combined in a tonic and cleanser which I call Hair Youth. From time to time each better help discovered has been added to it.

I believe the experts I consult know all that is known about hair. I know they supply me their utmost. Certainly no factors ever discovered have brought finer hair than mine.

Now I offer you, as I offer women, this supreme help for the hair. It is concentrated. You apply it with an eye-dropper directly to the scalp. There it combats the hardened oil and dandruff which so stifle the hair roots. It tones and stimulates. Then hair thrives just as flowers thrive in a well-kept garden.

I know that here I place at your command the greatest hair help in existence. Not some fallacious theory, not some ordinary tonic, but the best that science has discovered, so far as I can find.

All druggists and toilet counters supply my Hair Youth under guarantee. The first package brings you help you seek or I will pay the cost. The cost is 50 cents and $1.00 with eyedropper. Let me urge you to try it. We women—all of us—love to see heavy, healthy hair. And I have found the way.

I will send you a bottle to try without cost if you mail this coupon to me.

DAVIS A JOLLY FRIEND IN HIS OWN HOME TOWN

BY EDNA MARSHALL
(Copyright, 1924, by The Bee)

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., July 16—John W. Davis is West Virginia, always has been a West Virginian and never will be anything else—not to Clarksburg. It wouldn't matter if he lived 50 years in England or New York—he couldn't for the life of him get the home folks down in Clarksburg to admit that either is his home.

That is plain enough in the little town of narrow streets, blue grass lanes and wooded mountains where the old friends he went to school with and the older ones who watched him grow up, loiter by the court house or in the entrances to stores, buzz-buzzing with talk indistinct except for every tenth or twelfth word, which is the name "John W."

Clarksburk made him and gave him—or loaned him—to New York and the rest of the country. He is her most famous son since Stonewall Jackson's day.

"Why, he's one of us," Uncle John C. Johnson, the town's aged philosopher, quoth ponderously today from within his 14 inch white beard. "When he comes back he hides in his taxicab so no one can know he's here until he has had time to go home and change his dressified clothes He wouldn't think of being seen in Clarksburg in the cutaway he wears when he is up there in the dandified crowd. But in ten minutes he blossoms forth in his plain business suit—and the older the better, 'cause it means he's home and free again.

"Then it's 'by gosh, boys, I'm glad to see you—' to each one he meets along the street, and he slaps us on the back so hard it hurts Oh, he's a big lawyer, all right, and the finest man that's lived But he gets tired 'being nifty'—and when he gets down here, he's the real John—a plain man in plain clothes, with a regular laugh and a handshake that makes you flinch

"There's not a soul in Clarksburg, from two to one hundred years of age, who doesn't know John Davis and who hasn't had his name on the tip of his or her lips since years before it was decisively mentioned in the 103rd ballot in Madison Square Garden in New York last week.

"What makes a man belong to a place?" Old Pat Long wants to know. "See that house on the hill?" he continued. "It's his home. He comes there when he wants a rest. He's coming there to be formally told that he's the Democratic nominee. He doesn't go to New York to feel 'homey.' He puts on his fancy clothes and goes to work there.

"But when he comes down here, he and Dorse Cork hike over the hill to the old swimming hole after it's dark and splosh about like the kids they were forty years ago. Think New York has a swimming hole he can sneak to after dark and splash in?

"See that church over there—the little vine covered one across the street? That's the one his father built, and took him to pray in every Sunday, and if he didn't bow his head low enough, his dad prodded him in the ribs and told him to worship God

"See the room in the front of the old family house? That's where he sat every night while his father led the servants, his sisters, his mother and himself in prayer. And the hill where he 'used 'to shoo the cows to pasture? Say, I'd like to see any other place they claim to owning our John W."

New York is barking up the wrong tree if it figures to tell any part of the world, should Davis be elected, that he is an Empire stater because he has lived and worked there for the past ten years.

"Say, listen, do you think we'd forget our claim to a man who is sport enough, even when he knows he may be president, to laugh about the day Tom Brannon's bulldog bit the seat right out of his best trousers at a picnic with the girls from George Young's school?" asks Charlie Davis an old school mate "Were hanging tight to a fellow who still finds it funny to remember how he backed down Pinnickinnick hill to borrow a spare pair from me and then return to the festivities

He's a Clarksburger, all right Think we'd give him to the country? No, Siree, Sir We're loaning him, that's all"

Holds Gavel-Breaking Record

The strong right arm of Senator Thomas Walsh sent countless gavels to the gavel factory during the Democratic convention Since the problem of keeping the convention in order took plenty of gavel pounding he is credited with breaking more gavels than any other convention chairman on record This interesting pose shows the senator in the hot weather costume of a convention chairman

BRITISH FLIER IS SIX HOURS OVERDUE AND SEARCH BEGINS

(By The Associated Press)

TOKIO, July 16—A. Stuart MacLaren, British aviator flying around the world, is six hours overdue at Paramashiru Island, Kuriles, where he was to have landed today and a Japanese destroyer has set out in search of his airplane, according to a report received here from Paramashiru late today.

DAVIS TO PICK MANAG'R TODAY FOR HIS DRIVE

Nominee Will Also Select New Chairman of of Committee

(By The Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, July 16—John W. Davis, Democratic presidential nominee, will select today his his campaign manager and the new chairman of the Democratic national committee.

This announcement was made shortly before noon by George White, former national chairman, who with Clem Shaver, of West Virginia, spent the morning with Mrs. Davis at the home of Frank L. Polk here.

Mr Davis announced today that in order to give his entire undivided attention to the campaign he had determined to sever all of his legal and business connections. His law partners were notified accordingly of his withdrawal from the firm of Stetson, Jennings, Russell and Davis.

Among other employments surrendered by Mr Davis was that of general counsel for the Associated Press He also resigned the only directorates held by him namely in the United States Rubber Company, the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway Company and the National Bank of Commerce of New York

Close friends of Mr Davis maintained that as yet the candidate had offered the posts of campaign manager and national chairman to no one, although it was said his decision would be made shortly.

(By The Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, July 16—Although John W Davis, Democratic nominee for president, has not committed himself publicly on the question of dividing the management of his contest for the presidency, it was said today by persons high in Democratic councils that the candidate is favorably inclined toward such a division of responsibilities

At the end of his all-day conference with party leaders yesterday, Mr Davis said that no decision had been reached on the matter

The plan contemplates the sharing of the campaign directorship by the chairman of the national committee and the campaign manager Should such an innovation be adopted, it is reported that Clem Shaver national committeeman of West Virginia, may be chosen for chairman of the national committee, this despite rumors to the contrary One of the most seriously considered possibilities for campaign manager is said to be Thomas J Spellacy of Connecticut formerly an ardent McAdoo follower

It is said that the campaign manager is almost certain to be an eastern man. As a result that was much speculation regarding Vance McCormick, of Pennsylvania, and also some discussion of Daniel C Roper, of New York both of whom were actively identified with the Wilson campaign

When Mr Davis returned to his home in Locust Valley last night after a day of incessant conferences at the home of Frank L Polk, all these matters of organization were still undecided

The nominee has made arrangements to leave Friday night for Islesboro, Maine, the home of Charles Dana Gibson, but it is said that if a committee chief is not chosen by that time the visit may be cancelled

DRY AGENTS THREATEN TO "PADLOCK" HOTEL

By ROBERT T SMALL
(Copyright, 1924, by The Bee)

NEW YORK July 16—No one ever dreamed that the eighteenth amendment was to be aimed at bobbed hair beauty, but apparently there is no limit to the scope and power of that all-embracive measure.

The prohibition authorities are threatening to "padlock" the entire Ritz-Carlton hotel At first blush that would seem to be a blow aimed at the idle rich or at the night life of a great city It is charged that the Japanese Gardens on the Ritz roof have witnessed "the most flagrant" violations of the Volstead Act with which Major Haynes' minions of the law ever be come in contact Champagne was being sold there at $20 a bottle to all any any who chanced to have that much money, and more to invest in the bubbling water that was supposed to have disappeared some four years ago It boots nothing to say that the prohibition authorities were ignorant of these "flagrant violations" until a disgusted doctor who had been a guest on the roof walked into prohibition headquarters and threw his book of prescriptions down on the desk and announced that he was "through"

"Why should I fiddle along with these things in an effort to get a measly pint of liquor once in ten days for a man medically in need of the stimulant, when anybody can go on the Ritz roof and get all the intoxicants they desire in any quantity and any quality Prohibition enforcement has become a farce

Thus the irate physician delivered himself He added that he had all sorts of difficulties in the past in getting prescription blanks He had been put through the third degree His history had been taken He had felt he was being mugged and measured for the rogue's gallery And all because of the legitimate business of prescribing occasionally for an ailing patient

Naturally the prohibition headquarters officers were shocked beyond measure They had been busy padlocking cafes and cafeterias on the side streets of New York and also had made some recent forays against the cabarets that once upon a time were supposed to put the gayety in the once gay white way It had never occurred to them to visit the Ritz. To persons who have never been there, the Ritz has always been more or less awe-inspiring. Evidently the prohibition people felt the same way about it. Then, too, it must be said in their behalf that there has been a sort of gentlemen's agreement between them and the hotel keepers that the law would be respected without nightly visits or annoyances on the part of the sleuths.

But the Ritz was raided just the same The detectives hirel dress suits and drew something like $120 in expense money and had a gay time on the roof while it lasted Following the "pinch' of the most exclusive hotel in America, the authorities said the ywould "padlock" the roof. Then it was decided to try to padlock the entire hotel Papers to that end are being prepared Court action is necessary, but the prohibition people do not want to be charged with favoring the rich as against the poor, so they are going to try to close up the entire Ritz establishment

And just there is where the bobbed hair beauties of Manhattan get it in the neck. The Ritz always has been "the" place to get the boyish bob. And once you get the bob there you must always go back to get the proper trim and keep the bob under perfect control "Charles" at the Ritz has bobbed more royal heads than ever wore a crown He has been the last word in bobbing. Fifth avenue flocked to his tonsorial parlors. If "Charles" is put out of business under the National Prohibition act because a couple of dolled up sleuths bought some wine on the Ritz roof, the bobbed femininity of New York would descend upon the revenuers en-masse Even if the suspension is only temporary even if Charles should open up some place else, there will be much bobbed bitterness in the late July air For the modern bobbed head must be trimmed at least every ten days Then too, if Charles has to move away from the Ritz will it be "Ritzy' to go to him any more.

Verily, the prohibition law has teeth It biteth where no man dared suspect

FOREST FIRES ON WEST COAST STILL RAGING

Rains Relieve Situation In Two States—Vast Timber Lands Swept.

(By The Associated Press)

SAN FRANCISCO, July 16—Eastearn Washington northern Idaho and California today were continuing their more or less unsuccessful battles against forest fires but rains in western Washington and Oregon had nearly ended the fire menace there

Fires in northern Idaho and northeastern Washington last night had burned over several thousand acres of timber land and had destroyed the surface workings of four mines, a number of ranch houses and much property of lumber companies including several hundred thousand feet of lumber So far as known no lives have been lost, although a number of persons have been injured and some livestock killed Four persons are missing in British Columbia The flames were close enough to seven towns in the Pend O'Rielle River Valley to cause anxiety to the inhabitants In some places ranchers had loaded their belongings on railroad cars in preparation for a quick getaway. The surface buildings of the Nabob, Jim Blaine, Little Pittsburg and Douglas mines, near Kellogg, Idaho, have been destroyed In the Santa Barbara national forest, in California, lost night fire fighting crews succeeded in throttling the western advance of the flames to a comparatively narrow front between Saw Mill and Saw Tooth mountains, only to receive word that a fresh outbreak had been discovered at Oak Ground, a mile north of the main fire line The flames there were being fanned by a stiff wind

New fire in the Angeles national forest also in California in the San Gabriel range between Mount Lowe and Mount Wilson, burned over 30 acres but was controlled last night

A soaking rain late yesterday following showers on Monday virtually extinguished all small fires in western Washington and brought the more menacing blazes under control Fire Warden J M Digby of King county, Washington, said that one more good rain would settle fire worries in that vicinity for the present

FEAR EARTHQUAKE DISTURBS GOTHAM

PHILADELPHIA, July 15—"There is a very real danger that New York city may suffer from an earthquake one of these days"

"Unless the world gets over its mad search for oil, there are going to be some radical changes on this planet"

These are some of the startling predictions made by Prof David Todd of Amherst College, professor of astronomy internationally known scientist, and author of half a dozen books and unnumerable articles Prof Todd is at present spending his summer at the estate of P M. Sharpless, near West Chester

Prof Todd's observations are not based on any Sodom and Gomorrah idea of divine vengenance, but are, as he points out, the result of cold scientific reasoning New York city, he says, is as likely a site for the next earthquake as any in the United States This is because of the geological formation of the land beneath it Earthquakes almost invariably come at a point where two strata or layers beneath the surface of the ground come together When terrific pressure comes on this point, it is inevitable that it should crack

According to Prof Todd, it has been ascertained that just such an underground joint lies beneath Manhattan Island The pressure which will eventually force this joint apart and cause an earthquake is caused by the thousands and thousands of tons which are being heaped onto the island in the shape of huge buildings and foundations

He predict that when the earthquake finally comes, the destruction which follow will be far greater and more terrible than that which followed the Japanese upheaval of last summer.

Prof Todd is also pessimistic over the consequences of the "oil madness" which is gripping the world at the present time

"Did you ever see a driller strike oil?" he asked "If you have you will get some idea of the tremendous pressure which is locked up in the ground beneath us

GROWTH OF GEORGIA PEANUT ASSOCIATION

RICHMOND, July 15.—The Georgia Peanut Association in its second year of business reports that it has added 2,000 new members to its organization This organization with headquarters at Albany, Georgia, handles principally Spanish variety of peanuts A publication of the United States Department of Agriculture has the following to say concerning this new membership:

"More than 2,000 new members were added to the Georgia Peanut Growers Co-operative Association, Albany, Ga., during the recent membership campaign and the additional acreage brought under control of the association is estimated to be between 40,000 and 50,000 acres A favorable feature of the new sign-up is that the new members are largely landlords with fairly large acreages and it is believed that there will be few liens against their crops

"The campaign was carried on with a very small force and with a minimum expense A large percentage of the new members come from the territory where the association operated last year"

Conference On to Make Dawes Plan Effective

lem, urging the importance of putting the Dawes report into effect as a whole, without change of details.

It would be the business of the conference, said Mr MacDonald, to create conditions for the working of the Dawes report, the first being the fiscal and economic unity of Germany and the second, adequate security for prospective investers in the loan for Germany

One great merit of the experts' work, continued the premier, was the business-like methods they had adopted in preparing it and he hoped the present conference would follow their example. He pointed out that the Dawes report was not a final solution of the reparations problem, but that it was necessary to get this scheme into operation before other problems could be solved.

Therefore it was his desire that the conference deal solely with the Dawes report

Responding to the British prime minister's welcome, M Herriot, of France, thanked his colleague for his "noble words" He recognized the apparent difficulties before the conference, but he thought everybody was "imbued alike with love of country and love of peace." Therefore, he believed that the interests of the various peoples concerned, could be conciliated.

M Herriot proposed premier MacDonald as chairman of the conference, after which the business of organization was begun Sir Maurice Hankey was named secretary general and three committees were appointed to work out the agenda along the lines of the Herriot-MacDonald communique issued from Paris July 9

This business accomplished, the conference adjourned until tomorrow

YOUNG NOT OFFERED POST
(By The Associated Press.)

LONDON, July 16—Owen D Young, member of the Dawes committee of experts, today declared that neither the position of agent-general of reparations nor any other post under the Dawes plan had been offered him Therefore, he said the question of his acceptance does not arise.

It is generally assumed in British and American circles that if the London conference which begins today is successful and the Dawes plan is put into effect, Mr Young will be asked to take one of the most important posts, probably that of chairman of the transfer committee, otherwise known as agent-general of reparations The appointment will be made by the reparation commission, but officials consider it absurd to assert that such an appointment has been made before the London conference has started its deliberation It had been reported that Mr Young had already accepted an offer of the position who stopped at the Hall home to get water for the radiator

Nothing has been seen of the men since the car was found abandoned. This fact is perplexing officers endeavoring to solve the mystery Searchers believe the men made a futile attempt to drive across crabtree mountain in a frantic effort to get out of the mountains with the automobile It is pointed out, however that had they managed to reach the summit they would have found themselves in a region of impassable roads approaching the Tennessee border

J. S. Ainsworth, Austin, Texas, a cousin of the missing officer and Miss Bonnie McLeary, a sister, have positively identified clothing and papers found in two suit cases and a brief case as belonging to Major McLeary

Searchers have tramped over all portions of the sections adjoining the crabtree mountain road and the nearby branch but have thus far found no further clues.

Fear Shortage of Refrigerator Cars

(By The Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, July 16.—Cooperation between railroads and all shipping interests was asked by the Interstate Commerce Commission today to prevent a shortage of refrigerator cars during August, September and October, the peak season.

The commission asked shippers to avoid, so far as practicable, consigning to a market overcrowded with perishable products It also asked that consignees use every possible means of unloading refrigerator cars promptly on arrival and the carriers were asked to redouble their efforts to avoid delay in the movement of loaded and empty cars.

DRASTIC LAWS WILL RULE BROADCASTING

NEW YORK, July 15.—A law to prevent theatrical organizations' press agenting by radio may be proposed in the next session of the United States Congress as a result of the objections registered against the appeal for chorus girls repeatedly sent out recently from station WHN in Loew's State Theatre Building

It is reported that as a result of these appeals for show girls, hundreds of young women appeared daily at the offices of the brodcasting managers, ofwhich number but a very few more were employed It was learned today that the American radio association, as a result, is to ask Congress to pass legislation so regulating broadcasting as to prevent such abuses In the meantime the appeals for chorus girls from WHN have been suspended.

NO OFFICIAL NOTIFICATION CEREMONY FOR LAFOLLETTE

(By The Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, July 16—Senator LaFollette, of Wisconsin, probably won't be notified officially that the recent Cleveland convention of the conference for progressive political action endorsed him as an independent candidate for president

He knows he is a candidate in fact he knew it before the convention did—and he knows the delegates to the convention know As for their endorsement, he knows they know they gave it

So he has concluded it would be a waste of time money and energy to have a formal notification ceremony, such as is customarily accorded presidential candidates and his supporters, knowing his attitude are making no plans for one

When the conference's national committee meet here the last of the week to work out campaign plans, it intends to call on the senator That's the nearest approach there will be to a notification It probably won't even draw a speech from the candidate, who intends to wait for a later opportunity to launch into his speech-making campaign."

THE UNPARDONABLE SIN

The unpardonable sin has concerned the minds of men and women for ages, and until the advent of the Eighteenth Amendment which singled out the violation of the prohibition laws as the only unforgivable crime that could be committed in the United States, no one has ever settled on any one of the long list of crimes as being the unpardonable sin. But it is plainly visible thru the acts of the staunch supporters of the dry element that the violation of one of the dry ordinances is the worst crime that the human mind can conceive of. In fact, the man who dares to commit this, the greatest of all sins, is more cursed and degraded than if he were to take the life of his fellowman, or to break into his home and steel his belongings in the dead hours of the night, yes, even more wretched and despised than if he were to sin against society by dragging fair virgins down to shame and disgrace. All of these minor sins are relagated to the back ground in order that the prohibition cranks may vent their wrath upon the heads of the vile wretches who dare to stoop so low as to violate one of the least of the dry ordinances.

One of the most brutal and uncalled for sins that has ever been recorded in the category of criminal history was perpetuated in the name of prohibition enforcement last Monday afternoon at Sylvania, Georgia, when J. V. Dolan, county policeman calmly stood in his tracks and shot two brothers to death in cold blood just because they objected to him searching their automobile. And the worst phase of this useless killing is that two small boys yet in their 'teens and sons of one of the murdered men were sitting on the rear seat of the automobile when the shooting took place. Two homes were forever blighted and ruined and more widows and orphans were added to the long list of those who have been brought about thru the ruthless murder on the part of dry enforcement agents. But the policeman found five gallons of whiskey in the automobile, which in the eyes of the prohibition element, justifies the taking of human life and the making of widows and orphans, for what is that to them when compared to the unpardonable sin of being caught with wet goods in a car. But just the same the life-blood of Herman and Joe Bazemore is on the heads of the prohibition enforcement agents and their supporters, and they will have to answer to a higher power for the crime, a power that is not even prejudiced in favor of the Eighteenth Amendment.

This is not the only instance in which human life has been sacrificed in the ruthless fight for a bone-dry country, and a check on the operations of the dry agents will indicate that killings have taken place right here in the state of Virginia and even citizens of Danville have been shot in a similar manner while the killers have been allowed to go unpunished because they were enlisted under the snow white banner of prohibition. The vital question that should concern all of the people is how long will this wholesale killing and utter disregard for human life be kept up with the sanction of so-called liberty-loving American citizens?

Cheap matches are all right if you happen to strike a good one.

EFFECT OF DELAYS

It is announced that the defense in the Leopold and Loeb case in Chicago will seek to secure a postponement of the trial beyond August 4, the date fixed. The plea will be made because of "a dangerous public opinion." It is assumed that the "dangerous public opinion" is perilous to the accused men but that does not imply necessarily that it imperils justice. It happens in this instane that the interests of society and the personal welfare of the two young men may be in conflict. What is sought is a condition more favorable for the ones accused of murder. They believe time will be to their advantage. They will ask for themselves what they denied their victim.

Promptness in bringing to trial those in custody for crime is an essential part of effective criminal practice. That delays are permitted so often on flimsy pretexts tends to discredit the zeal of the courts for the dispatch of business and to profit the accused at the expense of the public interest. If the view were taken that one who commits an especially cold-blooded crime were one's self responsible for whatever inflamed public opinion follows on the act and that the situation affords no ground for special favor the cause of justice might be advanced. Delays are not designed for the furtherance of justice but to secure for those on trial something less than their due.

One accused of crime is entitled to a hearing. Guilt must be proved, but the previleges of the one on trial should not be permitted to transcend the welfare of society.

PRESS AGENT FOR COURTS

It is easy to understand why a proposal should be made to the American Bar Association that the courts should employ trained men to make abstracts of proceedings for the benefit of the newspapers. Experiences of lawyers, judges and editors, to say nothing of newspaper readers, at times, make such an innovation attractive.

Court proceedings, like those of scientific societies, are often so complicated that accurate and intelligent reporting of them for the newspapers challenges many writers. An unbiased, expertly prepared abstract of the more puzzling features might be helpful, but at best such methods should be only supplementary.

If this were the exclusive manner in which court proceedings should reach the public, it would amount to the creation of a press agency for the courts with all the evil that is inherent in such a plan. Newspaper representatives should have full and free access to court sessions, even at the risk of an occasional inaccuracy, rather than be confined to accepting the text of some official paraphrase.

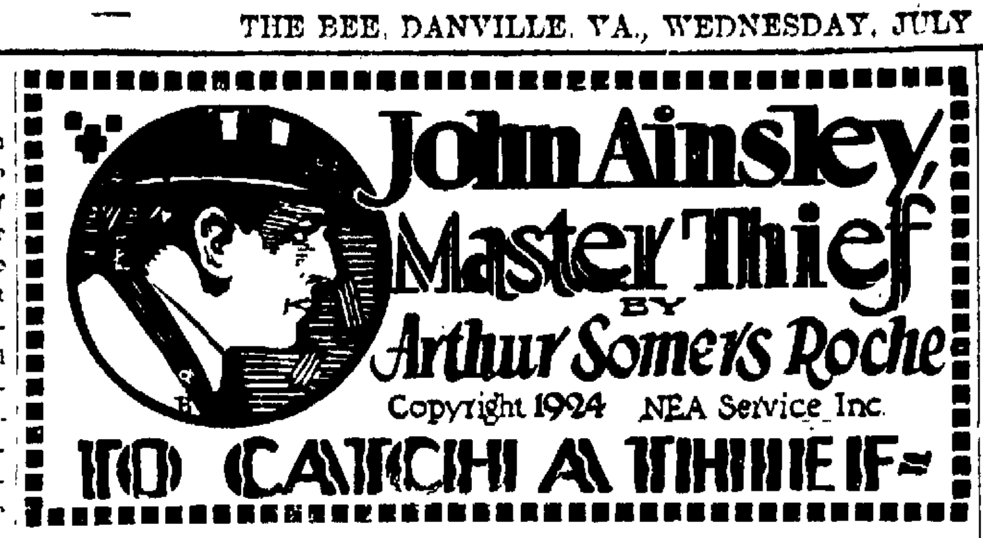

Newspapers no less than bench and bar depreciate the occasional inaccuracies in press reports of court proceedings which tax the intelligence of the reporter, but better a great deal to suffer infrequent lapses than to bottle up the news of public court hearings and uncork them only thru some official strainer.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

John Ainsley, a man of education and breeding, becomes a master crook—preying upon other thieves. At Monte Carlo he develops a desire to meet the clever thief who stole a pearl necklace from the throat of the Baronne d'Esterelle in the crowded halls of the Casino.

At the roulette tables Ainsley sees a young Englishwoman and his American bride lose all the money they have. More money is loaned to the Englishman by a Russian prince, and this, too, is lost on the tables. Ainsley suspects the Russian of some base motive. This suspicion is momentarily dispelled when he overhears the Russian grant the use of his hotel apartment to the destitute young couple. Later, however, he sees the Russian himself going to the hotel.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

I took the carriage, and three minutes later I was in my apartment, on the third floor of the Hotel de Paris. Two minutes after that I was standing in the corridor, watching, in amazement, the scene in progress before Apartment Three-twenty-two.

I had heard sounds of a struggle, voices raised in anger, an dso had stepped into the hall.

Before the open door of the Prince's apartment stood a group of men. The Russian was there two clerks from the office downstairs, and two porters. These latter gripped the arms of the young Englishman. The Russian was speaking.

"We were too quick for him, messieurs," he cried. "The minute I missed my keys, I hastened back here, and we are in good time to catch the thief who took my keys and has invaded my rooms."

He spoke in French, and the clerks and porters responded with excited congratulations.

HE HAD THE BIG MAN DOWN IN A MOMENT.

"Search him!" cried the Russian.

The young Englishman, obviously comprehending no French, demanded now the meaning of this assault upon him.

"I missed my keys," replied the Russian in English. "I return to the hotel. I tell the clerks. We come upstairs and find you departing from my rooms."

Young Beresford grew red. "But you gave them to me yourself, ten minutes ago, in the Sporting Club."

The Prince smiled. "You are a man with some shreds of common sense," he retorted. "Who will believe so ridiculous a statement?"

I had not been observed by any of the party, and I stepped back silently to my room, leaving the door slightly ajar s that I could still see and hear, without my espionage being detected. And if it be wondered at that I did not at once come to the rescue of Beresford, let me state that I preferred to watch the unfolding of the plot. You will confess that it was rather a pretty one.

"But why have you done such a thing?" croes Baresford.

"Ah, now you are prepared to be reasonable," said the Prince. He turned to the clerks, and in rapid French spoke to them. "The young man has suffered severe losses. In a moment of despair he has committed this crime. I am not a harsh man. If he shows the proper spirit of repentance, I am inclined to forgive him."

The French are a warmly impulsive peple. These members of that gallant race applauded loudly the Russian's generosity. Understanding no English, what followed was incomprehensible to them, and only served to prove to them that Beresford was a hardened rascal. For, in English, the Prince spoke to the unhappy prisoner.

"You wonder why I have done this thing? You forget that Madame, your wife, is exquisite."

"Don't mention her name, you swine!" cried Beresford.

The Russian shrugged. "But it is essential. You see, my young friend, that it is possible for me, with a word, to cause these men to release you. I will utter that word on one condition. If you could assure me that Madame your wife would take a motor ride with me, tomorrow, to, let us say, Cannes, why then, Mr. Bresford—"

* * *

He didn't finish the sentence. Young Beresford broke loose from the detaining clasp of the two porters and was at the Russian's throat. I tell you, it was magnificent. He had the big man down in a moment, and would certainly have killed him had there been less than four men to drag him away from his victim.

But four were too many. Bleeding and bruised, they finally dragged him from the Russian. Loudly the clerks assured Beresford that in ten minutes he would be in prison, and that he would be lucky if he escaped with a ten-years' sentence. He did not understand them, but if he had, I feel certain that it would not have bothered him at this moment. For if ever a man was obsesses with a desire to kill his enemy, Beresford was that man. His own predicament meant nothing to him now, save as it interfered with his wreaking a righteous vengeance on the Prince.

That worthy staggered to his feet. I stared through the crack in the door. Now that the plot had unfolded itself to its sordid denouement, I would have entered upon the scene and caused Beresford's release by corroborating his defense, but for one thing. That thing was an exclamation, apparently unnoticed by the others, that the Prince had uttered as Beresford first struck him.

"Ach, Gott!" the Prince had cried. Now, that is a purely German exclamation. And it was uttered by a man who previously had spoken both French and English with a pronounced Russian accent. Why did an apparent Russian, in a moment of great excitement, utter a German phrase without any sign of a Russian accent. Could it be because the Prince was really German?

Now, the Germans are not popular in France, or Monte Carlo, which, despits its independence, is French in speech and tradition. Of course, a German desiring to enjoy the pleasures of the principality might cloak himself with another nationality, without any ulterior purpose save that of enjoyment. But there was something so diabolically clever in the Prince's plan that I could not bring myself to believe that so utter a scoundrel adopted a masquerade solely for the purpose of enjoying the Riviera. He was, unquestionably, an imposter in his claim to princely rank. Was he something more than an imposter?

And I knew now that the answer to that question must be in the affirmative. For though he glared at Beresfordwith a hate that could have killed, the words which he addressed t- the hotel employees were mild.

"I am a man of mercy," he declared. "I can forgive theft, and even assault upon myself. This young man is accompanied by his wife. She will suffer in his shame. Let him go free."

* * *

Now, so far as the Prince knew, no one on earth was a witness to his conversation with Beresford in the corridor outside the roulette-rooms of the Sporting Club. Beresford's defense against the charge of theft would be laughed at in any court in the world. And the Prince was not the sort of man to be moved by those emotions of pity whose expression had imposed upon the warm-hearted Frenchman. The Prince had been struck and choked. His eyes told his desire for vengeance so simple of accomplishment, why did he forego it? Was it because he feared himself to appear in court, even as a complainant? Had he counted upon Beresford's yielding to his damnable suggestion? Had he never intended to carry his plot to its logical conclusion? Why?

Because, in addition to being an imposter, he was a criminal who dared not subject himself to the scrutiny of a court. And so, though, by a word I could have saved young Beresford from further humiliation, I waited.

"Monsier le Prince is too soft-hearted," said one of the clerks. "Nevertheless it shall be done as he wishes."

In Monte Carlo scandal of any sort is unwelcome. Thriving on the baser passions of mankind, the principality has no desire for the world to hear of matters such as this. To the world Monte Carlo presents an ingenuously smiling countenance, it does not thank the person who reminds the world that the concentrated vice of a continent is gathered here. Monte Carlo wishes the papers to print tales of its tennis matches, its yachting, its fetes; it wishes nothing sordid to seem to have occurred there.

"Monsieur Beresford will be put across the border tomorrow morning," said the clerk. "For tonight he will go to his room. A guard will be stationed outside it. He is a thief who cannot pay his hotel bill. But that does not matter. That will be forgiven on condition that he never comes to Conaco again."

Beresford, uncomprehending, began again a violent protest against the men who held him, and a denunciation of the Prince. He also said that he would appeal to the British consul.

The Prince, nursing a blackened eye, sneered at him.

"You are very lucky to get off as easily as you have done," he assured, "that if you offer any objection to the action of the authorities I will brand you as the thief you are."

And then the porters and the clerks dragged the Englishman away. And still I waited. After all, nothing serious would happen to young Beresford before tomorrow morning. Several hours remained before dawn. Much might be done in that time. If the Prince were the criminal that I suddenly suspected him to be, there might be other ways of coping with the situation.

The REFEREE

BY ALBERT APPLE.

PROHIBITION

Have you heard about Herman P. Faris? He's the national prohibition party's candidate for president. People in other countries will look puzzled and say. "I thought the Yankees already had prohibition. Why run a candidate on a dry platform?"

Another angle of "prohibition": Historic Plymouth Rock is being damaged by empty liquor bottles smashed against it by tourists. Some interpret this as fretful protest.

RUSTY

Rust will destroy 2500 million dollars worth of iron and steel this year in our country, estimates W. J. Overbeck, official of du Pont Company of Chicago.

The mineral resources of the world are being gradually destroyed by corrosive action of the air and by friction.

As for the present, we'd never have boom business if everything weren't constantly wearing out and having to be replaced by the new.

GARBAGE

London, England, expects soon to be lighting its streets with power obtained from the fuel in its garbage.

We are entering an age in which economies like this will be the basis of the great new fortunes. Natural resources have made most millionaires. They are virtually cornered in every direction and the cream skimmed off. Economy and shortcuts in these [illegible] are the roads to riches. Chemistry, in particular, is a wonderful field for the oncoming generation.

Ancient alchemists sought to turn lead into gold. Our generation in effect turns garbage and scrap heaps into gold.

INVADERS

Army worms by countless millions have been destroying crops lately in middle western states. In many places, they looked like squirming carpets on the fields.

A battle for supremacy on this earth is on, between man and insects. We are rapidly conquering disease germs. Insects are conquering us. Boll weevil, for instance.

CAUTIOUS

Destroyer Noa, of the U. S. navy, put into a Chinese port to replenish its fuel supply. Local manager of a British oil company cabled his London office regarding the matter of extending credit, and was ordered to demand cash payment.

Some American patriots are incensed about this, but groundlessly so. The British company probably simply had a line on Uncle Sam's red tape and delay and wanted its money without waiting 50 years. Maybe you've had dealings with Uncle Sam and know how fast he pays. Quite another story when you owe Sam. Be late a day and you're in hot water.

DANGER

The most dangerous hand tool is the ax, safety experts find by checkup. Now an ax is a dormant object. It doesn't jump up and take a slice at a man. Handled properly, it is as safe as a foot of cotton thread. Demonstrating that prevention of accidents is largely a matter of personal caution.

Another proof is in the fact that slipping ladders cause more accidents and kill more people than any other thing. Yet a ladder is 100 per cent safe, used cautiously.

This will never be a fool-proof world.

Scoop's Colyum

DRAKES BRANCH, July 16.—(Grapevine Wireless.)—One of the mysteries in this old world is, "Where does the money go." Married men are bothered with the problem constantly, for no sooner is the pay-check cashed than the money seems to vanish; there is seldom enough to go 'round no matter how carefully handled. One reader of this Album of Song has undertaken to figure it out and while he does not completely answer the riddle his conclusions are interesting.

Where My Money Goes. "Tire."

"Absolutely unexpurgated edition, gentlemen. Only a few copies—"

"Sorry, Mister, but we've found a short circuit in the carbureter and it will cost—."

"Long distance, please."

"Five no trump."

"After all the things she's invited you to, you've simply got to ask her."

"Now by the case, sir, you can save."

"Thanks a lot, old man! Pay you back Monday."

"Who 'n 'ell's got a cigarette?"

"Mrs. and Mrs. M. K. Rentch request the honor of your presence at the marriage of their left-handed daughter—"

"Gas."

What the Germans can't understand is why they should be expected to pay for a war they didn't use, murmurs, Abie.

After a loud and prolonged exhortation the preacher called for testimonials. A devout young lady of color arose and shouted her story. "Las' night Ah wus in de ahms ob de debbil, an' tonite Ah is in de ahms of de Lord."

Too Much Sugar.

At the recent meeting of the American Medical Association, Dr. Haven Emerson said the average American was eating far too much sugar and other sweet foods, and also far too much bread and cereals and other starchy foods. He proved it by several arguments in which he used figures from the country and abroad and relating to other times as well as the present. He showed that the average consumption of meat per person in the United States had fallen off. While he did not argue for a greater use of meat, he did indicate that eating more meat might be the lesser of evils.

Probably he thinks we eat too much of everything and should not increase our daily allowance of any food. However, if either our daily bread and sugar allowance, or our daily meat allowance, is to remain as it is, he would choose the meat allowance to stay and he would have us cut down on sugar and bread. The arguments he used were these.

Statistics show our consumption of sugar to be increasing at an enormous rate. Going hand in hand with this increase are increases in diabetes and in obesity. Just in the years when we are increasing our daily use of sugar and starch foods, we are walking less, working less, making less use of those heavy great muscles of the body which burn up sugar when they work, just as a locomotive engine burns up coal. During the world war, in various European countries, the people had to live on a short sugar ration and in some States on a short grain ration. During those years in those countries the people had less diabetes and they lost weight to great advantage. In some countries, the deprivations were of many sorts and in consequence, the people were less healthy and they died faster. In those countries where they were not deprived of much except a full sugar supply, they improved in health.

The Negroes in former years had very little diabetes. Now they are eating more sugar and they are doing less hard muscle work and in consequence they are developing diabetes more frequently. Another statement was that those Negroes that retained their old habits and customs had little diabetes. Those who had changed to easy habits and ate lots of sweets had much diabetes.

In the sugar producing State of Louisiana diabetes was increasing faster than in any other State, according to the figures.

The Irish of fifty years ago were a hard woraking people who ate but little sugar. They are now soft and fat and the diabetic rate among them is high.

The Jews had rather eat dessert than to dig ditches. In consequence they have a heavy diabetes rate.

The moral is:

Do not put more than one spoonful of sugar in your coffee, eat no dessert and ease up on sweet things.

Works Cause Choking.

Mrs. O. S. writes: I was interested in the letter of Mrs. T. J. C seeking advice concerning her three-year-old boy, who, she stated, had spells of choking every day and was also bothered with hives.

Since my own little girl had similar attacks I feel reasonably certain the choking and strangling spells are caused from worms. There was no guesswork about it in our case, for on one occasion the worms were expelled through the mouth—couged up.

The hives no doubt have nothing to do with these symptoms.

Perhaps the presence of worms did not occur to you at the time, as you did not mention them in your reply.

Knowing how little children sometimes suffer from this cause, I felt I had to send this suggestion.

REPLY.

I hope this suggestion will help Mrs. T. J. C. It may.

Facts About Leprosy.

A. M. P. writes:

1. What are the symptoms of leprosy?
2. Is this disease considered curable?
3. If so, where is there a hospital where such can receive treatment?
4. Can this disease be contracted without first having come in contact with some one who had it?

REPLY.

1. The most frequent symptom is a chronic skin eruption, with peculiarities that some physicians will recognize.
2. Yes. Though physicians do not agree as to the meaning of the word "cure." Many cases get well so far as symptoms go and remain without symptoms for many years.
3. Many cities and some States are caring for a few cases of leprosy. The large hospital is that at Carville, La.
4. No.

PARIS, July 16 —There is one week in Paris which stands out above all others—La Grand Semaine, or the Great Week

It is so called because of the great racing events of the week and is officially opened by the president of France

The three greatest events are the French Derby, which has mostly a French following the Dragues famous for beautiful carriages and of the three the greatest in social importance, and the Grand Prix which closes the week and is fast becoming an American event

Doug and Mary came back from Sweden to be here Ambassador Moore came up from Spain and everyone else waited in Paris until Grand Prix was over

What is worn at Grand Prix not only is indicative of what will be worn all summer at Deauville, Biarritz and The Lido but also forecasts the new collections of the French couturieres which appear in early and late August

Many checks both in alpaca and in sheer materials, much black and white, much mousseline de soie in pastel colors, many large hats, strange little square parasols, fantastic leopard skin trimmongs, many gay figured frocks and enough frocks along Japanese lines to make one wonder what their vogue is to be this coming winter

It was easily the greatest Grand Prix since the war, and what was worn will be talked about for weeks to come

Lieut. W B. Trundle Weds Miss Gertrude Douglas Perry.

The marriage of Lieutenant Wilson Burns Trundle and Miss Gertrude Douglas Perry which took place at Epiphany church, in G Street, Washington, D. C., Tuesday evening July 15, at 8 o'clock, was an event of interest to many people in Washington, the home of the bride, and in Danville, where the groom was reared and spent all the years of his boyhood

The bride's pastor, Rev Raymond L Wolven was celebrant, using the beautiful marriage service of the Protestant Episcopal church, of which both bride and groom are communicants. Mrs. W Langfelt Freseman, sister of the bride, was matron-of-honor and Miss Margaret August, of New York, was maid-of-honor. The six bridesmaids were: Misses Margaret Katherine and Elizabeth Perry of Staunton, Virginia, Miss Margaret Stimpson, of Philadelphia, Miss Elise O'Neal, of Baltimore, Miss Ellen Stuart, of Washington, D. C.

The groom was attended by Lieutenant John E Curry, who acted as best man, and the groomsmen, resplendent in the full uniform of the United States Marine Corps, fellow officers in the groom's regiment, were. Richard J Godin, Merrill B Twining, Lawrence Dewine, Robert Hunt, Robert Straub, Richard Malcolm Cutts, Jr Following the ceremony a reception was given to the bridal party at the Perry home, 2018 G. street, N W Later in the evening Lieutenant and Mrs. Trundle left for a motor trip to Virginia Beach and other points.

Miss Perry is the daughter of Mr and Mrs Custis Russell Perry, of Washington, formerly of Staunton Virginia, and is well known among the younger society set of Washington and northern Virginia as one of its most admired members, possessing a charming personality.

Lieutenant Trundle is the son of Mr. and Mrs. H Burns Trundle, of Danville, a graduate of United States Naval Academy class of 1923, and now connected with Washington Barracks

Mr. and Mrs H. Burns Trundle parents of the groom, his sister and brother. Miss Annie Dillard Trundle and Joe White Trundle, and his aunt Mrs A B Cheatham, of Danville, attended the wedding

An Intimate Story of Innermost Emotion Revealed in Private Letters

LETTER FROM JAMES CONDON TO SALLY ATHERTON, CONTINUED

But I must confess, Sally dear, that I also had a rather caddish desire to still listen in, and so I kept still.

"Mrs. Atherton is friend wife's dearest friend," said another man in a sarcastic tone of voice.

"Same old story," remarked another sapiently. "A man will break up the friendship of any two women."

"How about a woman coming between two men, old chap?" inquired the youngest member of the party, who hadn't said much.

"Well," remarked the man who had spoken first, "all I've got to say is that Prescott is walking on thin ice with that woman. There is something about her—an intangible something—that will make any man leave home and mother, and Jack Prescott is one of the most susceptible of men."

"Sure—don't you remember his affair with the little Perier girl—I'll bet he's sorry he threw her over now. They say she's drawing down three thousand a week in the movies."

By this time, Sally, I could stand it no longer, and I left my dinner half eaten and got out of the restaurant.

I did not tell all this to you, dear, when I was with you, for I was most unwilling to even let you know that your name was being coupled with Mr. Prescott's. I know that you love your work, and I was sure that your pride would be greatly hurt if you thought for a moment that anyone had the temerity to misunderstand your motives.

Oh, my dear, my dear, don't put yourself in a false position The world is still censorous of a woman's actions, even if those actions are of the most innocent intent.

I know you're saying: "Jim is talking like a father," and for once I'm glad to be able to do so, as you have always thought I was too young

Don't be angry at what I've written. I thought I could warn you better of Jack Prescott by telling you what other people said than to give you my opinion of him. I've always felt sorry for his wife, and especially so since I found him glowering at us that night in the restaurant when we were dining together. Why, he acted as though he owned you, Sally.

Dear, I don't want any man to own you, not even myself. You're too splendid in your own beautiful strength and independence, and so I only want to love you—love you better than all the world beside.

I can't do it, Sally I must keep on loving you. You have made yourself a part of me, and whether I wish to or not I shall have to carry you around in my heart as long as I shall live.

JUST JIM.

STUDY BANKING PROBLEMS

(By The Associated Press.)

BALTIMORE, July 15.—Intensive study of banking methods and problems will be made this week by delegates of the American Institute of Banking at their annual convention which began here today.

The Institute of Banking, a branch of the American Bankers Association, is composed of junior officers, cashiers and clerks in banks throughout the country and is primarily an educational organization. It has 160 chapters in various cities.

How can parents bring up the child in the way it should go when they allow it to go anywhere it pleases and at any time?

Buddy the Danville girls will greet you with a smile.

Mosquitoes Banished by Modern Discovery

Science finally finds way to rid home of all insect pests

Entomologists long have known that mosquitoes, like many other insects, are repelled by certain odors. It has remained, however, for scientists connected with the Dethol Manufacturing Co., Inc., of Richmond, Va., to evolve a preparation that both repels and kills mosquitoes and other pests—surely and economically.

Unlike most other anti-mosquito compounds, Dethol is effective over a wide area. When sprayed in a room or about the front porch, the vapor-like particles of Dethol are carried far and wide by the faintest breeze. Any mosquito within range of this spray is killed at once. And when the death-dealing cloud finally settles to earth, it forms an invisible blanket whose odor warns away other mosquitoes for hours.

Dethol also is particularly effective against flies, roaches, ants, moths, bedbugs, etc. Its penetrating spray searches out the hiding places of these pests and quickly destroys all forms of insect life. It does not stain; and it disinfects.

Many housewives find that Dethol is invaluable, too, in cleaning windows, tubs, tile, marble, etc Sprayed lightly on these objects, Dethol cuts grime and dirt like magic—you simply wipe the sprayed articles clean with a damp rag. Due to the fact that Dethol is a liquid spray, a very little covers a large space, thus making Dethol most economical to use. Full directions on can.

Drug, grocery, hardware and department stores sell Dethol in the handy combination package—complete with sprayer and large can of liquid—for 85c.

You really cannot afford to be without Dethol. If your dealer hasn't Dethol, we will send you the combination package, post free, on receipt of one dollar. Dethol Mfg. Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

ARGUMENT FEATURE OF YANKEES' VICTORY
(By The Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, July 15—The New York Yankees made it four out of five from St Louis here today, winning the last game of the series, five to four The game was held up for 15 minutes in the eighth inning by a protracted argument With Dugan on third Ruth on first and none out Meusel hit a low liner to left, which Bennett scooped in on a low bound Dugan scored and Ruth reached third. The St Louis club claimed that Bennett caught the ball and Ruth was doubled off first This claim was sustained by Evans who ruled both Meusel and Ruth out New York took the protest to Owens, the base umpire, who stuck to his original decision that the ball had not been caught, and Meusel and Ruth were returned to the bases St Louis refused to take the field for seven more minutes Score

The Sportsman

By WALTER CAMP

(Copyright 1924, by The Bee)

NEW YORK July 16—Miss Helen Wills is a lucky girl insofar at least as drawing oponents at Wimbledon and in the Olympic tennis matches she was also favored

Two out of her first three oponents were women she had already defeated within the year, Mrs Mallory and Mrs Satterthwaite All in all the fair American should come through the early stages of Olympic play rather easily and thus be in prime condition for harder play to follow

Think what prohibition has done to save the pocketbook of the man who does a hole in one—

Tradition has always demanded in the old days that it should open a tiertle and that all members of the club should enjoy drinks at his expense

Now, after holding his toe shot he writes out a statement concerning the miraculous performance which statement is signed by his opponent or a competent witness This he send to the manufacturer of golf balls and receives a box of balls free This is somewhat of an improvement on the necessity of going down into one's pockets and paying for the drinks of one hundred men

Great Britain's 85 1-2 points gained in the Olympic mark a forward stride in international competition and no doubt the spur of the achievements of that nation in the sprints and in distance events will result in a still further improvement when the next Olympics are held in 1928

NEGROES APPEAR TO LIKE NORTHERN STATES
(By The Associated Press.)

ASHEVILLE, N. C. July 15—There is no credible evidence that negro migrants to the north are returning south in any considerable proportion or are likely to do so, declared Dr W W Alexander of Atlanta, director of the commission on inter-racial co-operation, at tonight's session of that board's annual convention being held at the First Presbyterian church here

Dr Alexander's report reviewed the general situation, calling attention to the results of negro migration, the decline of lynchings, the increase of educational facilities for negroes and the rapid growth of general interest in the subject of race relations

Seventy-five prominent men and women from all parts of the south as well as a number of visitors from the north and east were in attendance at the opening session this morning which was mainly taken up with reports of officers and field workers

CAVINESS EASILY TURNS IN VICTORY FOR DURHAM OVER TOBACCONISTS, 7-3

DURHAM, July 15—Durham evened the series by trouncing The Tobacconists here this afternoon by the score of 7 to 3. "Smoky Joe" Caviness was in superb form and held his former teammates to six bingles while Shoaf was very ineffective allowing The Bulls a dozen bingles The Danville ace's injured finger on his pitching hand had not entirely healed and this seemed to be worrying him

Manager Herb Murphy of Danville was rendered unconscious in the fourth inning when he was hit in the head by a pitched ball It was several minutes before he was revived but he resumed play in the next inning However, in the eighth he gave way to Regan and Wefers, Giant recruit, was sent to center Wefers had only one chance and it was a very hard one In the mind of the scorer he should have handled the ball and therefore was given an error He did not have a chance to demonstrate his ability as a batsman.

Durham started off by scoring three runs in the first inning Bourg beat out an infield hit and Kearns shot a hot grounder through Myer's legs Bourg going to third and Kearns to second Brummett drotpped a Texas leaguer and Bourg registered Mallonee doubled and Kearns and Brummett scored.

The Virginians scored in the fourth Murphy was hit and Wilson went in to run for him Wilson scored on successive singles by Resco and Myers an effort being made to catch Wilson at the plate but he was called safe on a close decision Danville added two more runs in the sixth Murphy opened with a triple to right field McDonald filed out to center and Murphy trotted in After Resco had filed out, Myers hit one of the longest two base hit ever seen here Fast fielding by Brummett kept the player from reaching third Cochlin singled and Myers counted

The two teams will play the third and last game of the series tomorrow

For the Game's Sake

By LAWRENCE PERRY

(Copyright 1924 by The Bee)

NEW YORK July 15—Arrangements are being perfected to make the long talked of project of organized inter-college rowing in the west an accomplished fact An acquatic body has been formed with T E Jones director of physical education at Wisconsin as president and definite steps will be taken to interest many western institutions—middle and far west—in the plan

In a letter to the writer, received today T E Jones says that the splendid showing of the Badger crew at Poughkeepsie has tended to put rowing at the University on its feet and to insure the presence of future crews on the Hudson

Mr Jones says that the western rowing scheme will in no way interfere with the presence at Poukhkeepsie of Western crews and indeed plans have been considered to build a rowing quarters with all accommodations for such western eights as come east

It may work out that the western body will become affiliated with the intercollegiate rowing association although Mr Jones does not say this In such event national regattas held alternately in the east and west might well be the outcome

'Darwin Meisnest graduate manager of the University of Washington' writes Mr Jones "dropped off at Madison from the east, where he accompanied his crew to Poughkepesie and conferred with me regarding the formation of a western regetta in which Washington Wisconsin and California were to be charter members the purpose of the organization being to promote rowing in the western institutions, many of them are well equipped with facilities for rowing

'The plan was discussed of holding a regetta alternately in the middle west and the far west, but our plan was also to continue to row at Poughkeepsie"

Minnesota, with as fine a rowing course bounding one side of the campus as exists in this country, the Mississippi River, has been dabbling with intra-mural rowing and Fred Luehring the director of athletics, formerly associated with athletics at Princeton has been developing the acquatic spirit among the Gophers with a view to taking up the sport on an intercollegiate basis.

Leuhring advises the writer that the University has in its student body a number of men who have swung sweps at Duluth and other Northwest rowing centers and says that it is the question of finances rather than material that has withheld the university thus far

NEW YORK, July 16—In connection with the announcement of the plans for the thirty-first annual invitation tennis tournament of the Seabright Lawn Tennis and Cricket Club is the interesting statement that William Johnston and Miss Mary K Brown, both of the Pacific Coast, will participate. The tournament begins on July 25 and will probably mark the first important events in which these two coast stars will enter. Both need to conserve their strength and a short brisk season probably will find them in better condition than in years

Since the palmy days of the old University of Michigan athletic dynasty honors in sport in the middle west have been pretty well distributed But with the results of the 1923-24 season turned in Illinois finds herself in the proud position of sitting back and contemplating an athletic prominence that carries one back to the old maize and blue regime for analogy

Here is how the list runs

Football—tie for championship of conference

Basketball—tie for championship.

Track and field—championship

Indoor track and field—Championship

Golf—Championship

Tennis—Championship

If an alluring record of this sort does nothing else it appeals to budding athletes in the secondary schools and is certainly an advertisement for the Illinois summer school for coaches

Probably it was just as well we didn't send a political team to the Olympics The mud-slinging championship isn't important, anyway.

COMPETITION KEENER AS FIELDS NARROW DOWN IN OLYMPIC CHAMPIONSHIPS

(By The Associated Press.)

PARIS, July 16.—Now that the fields are narrowing down in all branches of the Olympic championships, competition promises to be keener today with the Americans all set to carry a determined battle to their rivals in at least three sports—tennis, swimming and boxing.

Having qualified the last of their five entries yesterday, when the Yale crew and the doubles sculling combination of Costello and Kelly scored easy victories in trials for tomorrow's finals, the U. S. oarsmen will have a day of rest. Other American contestants, however, will have an exceedingly busy schedule.

Miss Helen Wills, American woman tennis champion, demonstrated by eliminating Mrs Satterthwaite, of England, in the singles yesterday that she will make a strong bid for the Olympic title. She is among three American women in the last 16 of the championship contestants, the others being Miss Eleanor Goss and Mrs. Marion Z Jessup. The men survivors are R. Norris Williams Watson M Washburn and Vincent Richards. The latter has a stiff match today, meeting Manuel Alonso, the Spanish champion.

Francis T Hunter, who was put out of the running yesterday by Jean Washer, the Belgian star, remains in the doubles with Richards, along with Williams nad Washburn among the men, while Miss Wills and Mrs George Wightman are the sole surviving women's pair. They will encounter familiar rivals today in the Norwegian players, Mrs Molla B Mallory and Mrs. Dahl.

Today Johnny Weismuller, holder of some fifty odd world's swimming records and whose renown in France, as a champion, equals that of Charley Paddock as a sprinter, makes his debut at the Les Tourelles Pool in the Olympic competition. Johnny who has been chaffing at the bit while his compatriots were rapidly being eliminated, will start in the 400 metre eliminations.

The boxers from the United States who got off to a good start in the first eliminations yesterday, will carry on in the ring battles today.

Today's rowing schedule consists in final eliminations in three events—the four-oared with Coxswains; the single sculls and the 8-oared shell. Chief interest centers on the expected battle between the eights of Argentina and Canada with Belgium, Australia and the other contenders for the right to oppose the U S, Great Britain and Italy in the finals.

HAWAIIAN SWIMMER BREAKS OLYMPIC RECORD

(By The Associated Press.)

LES TOURELLES, July 16.—The fourth day of the Olympic swimming program was run off in more moderate weather than had been the rule all the week. The scorching sus disappeared behind benevolent cliuds and the attendance was increased enormously. A crowd of 10,000 persons turned out, one of the largest of the swimming tournament and bigger than the throngs that were witnessing even the interesting Olympic tennis matches and the rowing events.

Warren Kealoha of Hawaii, broke the Olympic record for the 100 metre back stroke swim in the first Olympic elimination trial today, covering the distance in minute 32 2-5 seconds, shattering the mark he established at Antwerp by swimming the distance four-fifths of a second slower than the world mark he also made at Honolulu in 1922.

Kealoha was five seconds faster than the winners of the other four heats. Bartha of Hungary made the distance in one minute 18 2-5 seconds. Rawlinson of Great Britain in 1 minute 18 4-5 seconds. Thaulo, of Norway, in 1 minute 24 seconds flat, and Paul Wyatt, of Uniontown, Penn., in 1 minute 19 2-5 seconds.

Johnny Weismuller, Illinois A. C., won the third heat of the 400 metres free style event.

200 metre breast stroke, men Second semi-final. Decombre, Belgium first. Linders, Sweden, second. Time 3 minutes 2-10 seconds, equalling the new Olympic record made by Robert D. Skelton in the first semi-final.

400 metres, free style men, two to qualify for semi-finals Thursday. Ralph Breyer, Northwestern University. Hatfield, Great Britain, second time, 5 minutes 2-5 seconds.

400 metre free style, men third heat: Johnny Weismuller Illinois A., first. Andrew Charlton, Australia second. Peter, Great Britain, third. Time 5 minutes 22 1-5 seconds.

200 metre breast stroke, first heat women, two to qualify for finals tomorrow. Miss Agnes Geraghty, women's swimming association, New York, first. Miss Peterson, Sweden, second. Time 3 minutes 26 2-5 seconds. Mlle. Barond, of Holland, finished first, two seconds ahead of Miss Geraghty, but she was disqualified for faulty turns.

400 metre free style, men, sixth heat: Lester Smith, Olympic club, San Francisco, first. Annison, Great Britain, second. Time 5 minutes 32 2-5 seconds.

SWIMMING SUMMARIES

200 metres, breast stroke, women, third heat. Miss Carson, Great Britain, first; Miss Topel, Sweden, second. Time 3 minutes 30 seconds. Miss Matilda Shurich, women's swimming association, New York, finished third and was eliminated.

200 metres, breast stroke, women, second heat. Miss Morton, Great Britain, first; Miss Koster, Luxembourg, second. Time 3 minutes 20 2-5 seconds. Miss Eleanor Coleman, Milwaukee, finished fourth and was eliminated.

200 metre Breast stroke, men, first semi-final score: Robert D. Skelton, Illinois A C, first. W T Kirschbaum, Hawaii, second. Time 2 minutes 2-10 seconds, breaking the Olympic record.

TENNIS RESULTS.

OLYMPIC STADIUM, COLOMBES, France, July 16—Mrs Marion Z. Jessup, America, in the upper half, and Mrs Molla B. Mallory, Norway, in the lower half, both reached the last eight in the women's singles of the Olympic tennis championship today.

Mrs Jessup routed the Spanish senorita, Torras, 6-2, 6-0, while the former American woman champion playing for Norway in the Olympic competition, eliminated Miss Boutan, of Holland, 9-7, 6-0.

The Dutch girl fought finely in the first set, driving well and accurately both forehand and backhand, but did not have the stamina to stick with Molla.

Tommy Gibbons Is 33 Years Old

(By The Associated Press.)

ST PAUL Minn., July 16.—Here is the correct answer to a question that has long perplexed fight fans and sporting editors—How old is Tommy Gibbons, the St Paul heavyweight who meets Jack Bloomfield in England late this month?

The "official" records of the ring say he is all the way from 30 to 35 years old, just before his fight with Champion Dempsey a year ago he said he had just passed his 29th birthday.

But the only actual official record, on file in the health department of St Paul, perused today by The Associated Press, show that he was born here March 22, 1891, and thus has passed his thirty-third birthday.

Moore Defeats Omaha Boxer

(By The Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, July 16.—Middleweight laurels encircle the brow of Ted Moore, of England, today as a result of his decisive defeat on points of Morrie Schlaifer, of Omaha, Neb in a ten-round bout at Henderson Bowling, Brooklyn. Moore out generaled his opponent from start to finish of the match.

Dempsey Will Not Fight This Year

(By The Associated Press.)

CHICAGO, July 16.—Jack Dempsey world's heavyweight champion, will do no fighting this year, says Jack Kearns, his manager here arranging for the appearance of the champion in Chicago theatres.

The title-holder's manager said there was no opponent in view for Dempsey whose time is taken up filling contracts with moving picture concerns.

NEW YORKERS ELIMINATED.

(By The Associated Press.)

PARIS, July 16.—Dr J E Gignoux and Chauncey McPherson both of the New York A C, were eliminated today in the first round of the Olympic individual sabre competition.

P J McCarthy carried a weight of 2250 pounds on his back for eight steps side-stepping, at St. Louis in 1898.

DAVIS MAIN STREET SHEIK, PAL RECALLS

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., July 16.—John W. Davis will have his national campaign managers and district campaign managers, but his sister is going to have something to say about the campaign in his birth town.

She is Miss Emma K. Davis, a woman of forceful personality. Friends here predict that although she'll have no title in the Demrocratic army, she will take full command here.

Before her return from New York she had telephonic conferences with friends here, advising them how to proceed. It may be noted that they followed her directions explicitly.

She is as well-known in Clarksburg as her brother, and friends take the liberty of referring to her as "Emma K." No one however, has heard her so called to her face.

* * *

There is a striking similarity between the background of Calvin Coollidge and John W Davis. Both are from families of deep religious convictions.

John Davis, grand father of the Democratic nominee, used to gather his slaves into his home Sunday evenings at Clarksburg and lead them and his family in prayer.

His religious zeal was passed on to John J. Davis, his son who was the largest contributor to the Central Presbyterian Church in Clarksburg. He was so active in its founding, and his financial aid so great, it is sometimes referred as the "Davis Chapel."

* * *

John W Davis' parents were very strict. Friends tell how his mother once told him to go down to the post-office to get the mail.

John, then but a little fellow, replied

"I would go mother, but I am afraid it would spoil the servant."

His mother replied that she would rather have all her servants spoiled than to have her son shirk work.

Davis took warning and got the mail.

His mother gave Davis practically all of his grammar and high school education. He never went to the public schools of Clarksburg.

She was a brilliant woman. She mastered Latin and Greek after the birth of her first child.

* * *

For a short time Davis went to a private school conductedby one Bettinger.

"Davis and I remember Bettinger by one thing only," says George Duncan, now a Clarksburg banker, and once boyhood chum of Davis. "He always taught class with his feet on the deck and a long black stogie in his mouth."

* * *

In spite of his rigorous training, Davis was a true boy, Duncan says.

Both probably were the 1893 counterpart of the modern sheik.

"We didn't go joyriding in autos in those days," Duncan says. "We owned horses and rigs. Many times Davis and I raced down Main street to the dismay of the more staid folk. But Davis' horse could never beat my sorrel."

Davis used to run away from the maternal apron string to the old swimming hole with Duncan and other boys. Davis' grandfather was a saddler. His father also operated the saddlery in Main street for a number of years, even after Davis was born but later entered the bar and politics.

* * *

Davis entered politics unknowingly against his father's strict orders. In 1910 delegates of the grst West Virginia congressional district met to choose a congressional candidate.

Hearing they were almost unanimous for his son John J Davis sent a telegram forbidding him to accept the post. To make sure he sent another telegram.

Ignatius Brennan, political boss got the telegrams first. He kept them in his pocket until after Davis accepted. He was elected and has never been defeated for any office.

* * *

"I know more about Davis than his father," boasts Dr J W Johnston, Davis family physician for the past 25 years.

But upholding professional traditions, he won't tell secrets.

Dr Johnston went to the Democratic convention at his own expense to aid Davis. He claims to have swung the North and South Carolina delegations into line for him.

* * *

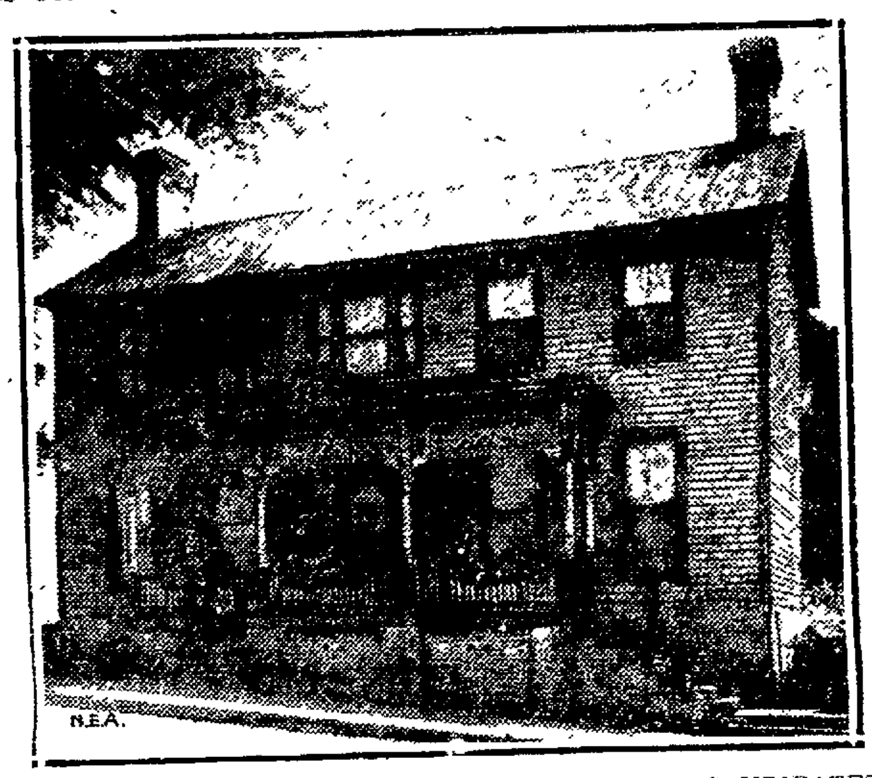

All Clarksburg is Davis mad. Business has ceased its usual quiet course since his nomination.

People who haven't spoken to each other for years are talking Davis on the street corners.

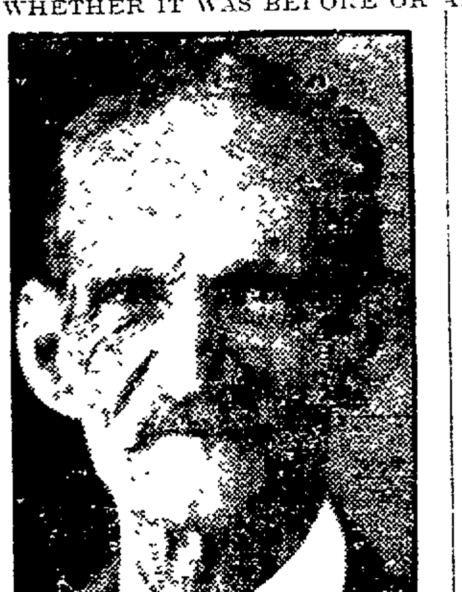

Visitors are inflicted by any number of self-appointed guides who insist on showing where Davis stood when he made his first speech, where he ate lunch, and where he first met Ellen Bassel, his second wife.

MISS EMMA K DAVIS SISTER OF JOHN W DAVIS, WILL HAVE A LOT TO SAY ABOUT HOW HIS CAMPAIGN FOR PRESIDENCY IS CONDUCTED IN HIS HOME TOWN CLARKSBURG, W VA

JOHN W DAVIS IS UNLIKE MOST PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATES, IS NOT BEING BORN IN LOG CABIN. EVEN HIS OLDEST FRIENDS AREN'T SURE WHERE HE WAS BORN BUT MOST OF THEM THINK THE HOUSE ABOVE IS THE PLACE. THE DAVIS FAMILY MOVED INTO IT ABOUT THE TIME OF HIS BIRTH—FOLKS AREN'T SURE WHETHER IT WAS BEFORE OR AFTER.

DR J W JOHNSTON HAS BEEN THE DAVIS FAMILY PHYSICIAN FOR 25 YEARS. HE WENT TO NEW YORK AT HIS OWN EXPENSE TO HELP NOMINATE HIM

GEORGE DUNCAN BANKER AND THE BEST DRESSED MAN IN CLARKSBURG W VA WAS A BOYHOOD CHUM OF DAVIS. THEY USED TO RACE HORSES ON MAIN STREET, AND DUNCAN CLAIMS HE ALWAYS WON

Grandstand Gaff

SMILING Joe Caviness, bedubbed "Smoky Joe" and former Danville tosser, took a "sweet" revenge from his former teammates and let them down with but half a dozen scattered bingles. Shoaf his opponent was not in his usual good form, or a different tale would have been told. The Danville hurler's cut finger on his pitching hand had not entirely healed, and he could not put all his "stuff" on the old pill.

With the series evened, today's game will decides who cops the series. McWhirter will probably be Murphy's choice. After today's game, the Leafs travel to Winston to tackle the Twins for three days.

Wafers broke into the game yesterday, but was not in long enough to demonstrate what he could do. He was not at bat at all and had but one fielding chance. This was a difficult one. The fielder muffed it and the scorer gave him an error, holding that he should have handled the ball.

Roger Peckinpaugh of Washington on his great play this year is probably the most valuable shortstop in the American League. His brilliant defensive play has been one of the greatest contributing factors to the sensational showing of the Nationals. Peckinpaugh is covering more ground than he ever did, which is saying a great deal.

With half of the season over, Howard Ehmke of Boston, leads the major league pitchers with the most victories, 13. Others close up are Thurston of the White Sox and Vance of Brooklyn with 12, Grimes of Brooklyn, with 11, and Hoyt, of New York, Johnson, of Washington, and Kremer, of Pittsburgh, tied at 10.

Two years ago, American League critics pronounced Chick Galloway of the Athletics the best shortstop, the most improved player in the league. Recently Connie Mack removed him from the line-up because of erratic work in the field.

Manager Stanley Harris of the Washington Nationals says that in Fred Marberry and Allan Russell he has the two best relief pitchers in the American League. That is Russell's exclusive job.

If Bluege of Washington was a better batsman he would be vieing with Joe Dugan, of New York, for the honor of being the best third sacker in the American League. He is every bit as good a fielder.

Hard luck appears to camp on the trail of Connie Mack. "Curley" Ogden, after losing three games for Mack, was sent to Washington at the waiver price. He proceeded to win his four next starts for that club.

Virginia-Carolina League Is Dream

Sports followers in Lynchburg appear to be content with the amateur or semi-pro baseball being played during the summer in that city and in the nearby towns. What is known as the Tri-county League has been proving the sport, with teams at Big Island, Brookneal, Altavista and other points. In this conection it may be of interest to note that two Danville boys, formerly players on the High school teams and later at the University of Virginia, are playing excellent ball with these Tri-county teams. They are Luther and Darlington, the first named a catcher on the 'Varsity team at Virginia, and the other a star on the freshman team.

In this connection the Lynchburg News in a local story tells of the selection of a team to represent Lynchburg in games with amateur teams from other cities and towns. The following is quoted:

Arrangements have been made for a high grade of baseball games to be staged at the Fair Grounds every Thursday during the rest of July and the month of August while the stores are closing for the half holiday on those days.

A team to represent Lynchburg will be composed of some of the best players in the Tri-County League and teams from Roanoke, Richmond, Danville and other points will be invited here for games. Thursday, July 17, the Tri-County team from Big Island will be the visiting team at the grounds, to be followed by teams from the towns mentioned.

Doubtless the teams from Richmond, Danville, Roanoke, etc., are the organizations like the Church Hill Athletic Club, the Danville All-Stars and the Roanoke shopmen's and railroad office teams. Many sport followers in this city have expressed a desire to see Lynchburg and Roanoke again in league baseball, but the opportunity has not yet appeared. Should the Piedmont League begin to crack or crumble, it has been suggested that Winston-aSlem, Greensboro, and Durham, from the North Carolina side, and Danville, Lynchburg and Roanoke would make a compact circuit. Experience has demonstrated that an eight-club circuit cannot finish a season in Virginia. With direct and ample railroad connections and with modern highways extending from Roxboro to Winston-Salem, from Lynchburg to Durham, and from Danville to Greensboro the travel costs would be slight. The six cities named—three in each State—have an aggregate population in excess of two hundred thousand.

Such a circuit is all a dream, however, unless the present Piedmont circuit should disintegrate.

"I saw an automobile license tag, today," said Mr. A, "that read 'ten, ten, ten, ten.'"

"That's impossible!" replied his friend, B. "Such a number would be 10,101,010, and no State has as high a nmber as ten million!"

Nevertheless, A saw the license tag in question. What State was it from and what number was it?

GIRL, SIXTEEN WINS 72 HOUR BATTLE FOR LIFE

By M. S NEWTON.

(Copyright 1924 By The Bee.)

BRENCHEN, Ontario, July 16.—Sixteen-year-old Margaret Murchison is slowly struggling back to consciousness today after a soul-trying battle for life lasting 72 hours in the waters of Lake Simcoe, during which her two men compaions succumbed. Only the most remarkable vitality determination and courage could have carried her back to safety in the face of storm exposure, blistering sun and hunger after one of the men who set out with her last Thursday from Big Bay point in a sailing canoe had drowned and the other, a veteran of the World War, had died in her arms of heart failure.

Verging on total collapse from her harrowing rdeal during which she clung fr three days and nights to the drifting canoe, clad only in a bathing suit and sweater, and terribly sun blistered, the girl was found struggling through a belt of reeds at Concord Point near here by Harry Grant of Toronto. She is ow under medical attendance at a cottage here and is expected to recover fully unless pneumonia sets in.

Dazed and semi-conscious, Miss Murchison sobbed out the maith details of her story to Grant, who related them to the writer today.

"I was out in a rowboat just off Concord Point, when I heard faint cries for help," Grant said. "I saw what first looked like a little child, struggling through the reeds. I rowed ashore, and, to my surprise, saw that in reality it was a young woman apparently of about seventeen, clad only in a bathing suit and sweater, and bent almost double from exhaustion, dragging herself along by the aid of a stick.

"She was horribly sun-burned and so weak she could scarcely speak, but when I asked her who she was, she gasped out that her name was Margaret Murchison, an dthat she liped at Big Bay Point. Then I realized that she was one of the three people who had been missing since last Thursday. As I helped her toward the nearest cottage she told me her story.

"The girl, her brother-in-law, Edgar Smith, and Wilbur Hoskins, set out from Big Bay Point Thursday afternoon, intending to go to Barries. They were in a sponson canoe equipped with a sail. This type of canoe is built with air chambers running along either side, and is practically unsinkable. It will turn oper but will right itself again.

"They had scarcely started when a sudden squall sprang up, and tipped the canoe over, plunging them into the water. The lake was so rough that the people ashore apparently couldn't see that they were in difficulty.

"Wilbur Hoskins clung to the overturned canoe for a short time, but his strength finally gave out and he went under. As the canoe righted itself Miss Murchison pulled her brother-in-law, Edgar Smith, into it. Again it turned over and against she helped the almost exhausted man back to safety. A third time and Smith collapsed, dying fom exhaustion as she held him.

"Realizing that he was dead the girl retained her hold.

"From Thursday afternoon to Sunday evening she told me, she was either drifting in the canoe or clinging to its keel. How she held out so log is difficult to understand."

ALL SECOND DIVISION CLUBS LOSE TO LEADERS IN THE AMERICAN LEAGUE

(By The Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, July 16.—Second division clubs in the American League today are in the throes of an inferiority complex as they ponder the results of their latest clash with the four pace makers. New York, Washington, Detroit and Chicago, while maintaining their own relative standing intact, widened the gap by a full game between themselves and their trailers by defeating St Lou's Cleveland Philadelphia and Boston, respectively.

Shocker, who attempted to redeem himself for his trouncing in the first game of the series again faltered and lost a 5 to 4 decision to the Yankees. The Browns defeat was embittered by an unfortunate break in the eighth inning, which put their opponents in a position to score the winning run. Umpires Evans and Owens disagreed as to whether Musel's liner to left with Dugan on third and Ruth on first had been caught by Outfielder Bennett. Bennett threw to first thinking to double up Ruth. Evans sustained the claim of a double play but Owens, with whom the final decision rested, permitted Dugan to score and ordered Ruth to second and Meusel to first. Ruth subsequently registered the deciding run. Jacobson hit his 13th home run of the season.

Behind the kind of pitching that has made Walter Johnson one of the greatest boxmen of all time Washington scored a comparatively easy victory over Cleveland 4 to 2. Johnson set the Indians down with five hits. It was the Senators fourth straight win in the five game series.

Detroit won a lurid slugging match from Philadelphia in which seven pitchers were used by an 11 to 3 score. Manush was the leading sticker with four hits out of seven efforts.

Chicago made it 3 in a row from Boston with an 8 to 6 triumph. Both Leverett and Fuhr were hit hard.

The Giants increased their lead over the coasting Cubs to nine games and a half and cleaned up the four game series with a 9 to 4 win.

Kelly hit his fifth homer in five contests and his 17th of the season. Hartnett hung up his tenth [illegible] wallop.

Wilbur to Decide Whether Further Probe Is Necessary

(By The Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, July 16.—Secretary Wilbur [illegible] his [illegible] staff [illegible] whether further investigation [illegible] fix responsibilities for failure [illegible] with regulations [illegible] a naval court of inquiry has attributed the loss of 47 or 48 lives in the turret explosion June 12 aboard the Battleship Mississippi.

The accident which resulted in the death of three officers and forty-four men and the injury of nine others with one man not accounted for, is described by the court of inquiry as one of a series of three explosions in the turret during firing practice off the California coast. The first resulted in no damage, the second caused the heavy loss of life and the third, four hours later, added ten to the number of injured. The first and third were in the left gun of the turret and the second was in the right gun.

DANVILLE MILITARY INSTITUTE

A member of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools and a member of the Association Military Schools and Colleges in the United States. This means approved standards.

The Institute offers first-class physical, mental, moral training in the midst of a wholesome Christian environment at a very moderate cost.

Military schools make men and give education plus.

Dr. Frank Crane recently said, "There should be military training for every boy in the United States."

General Pershing summed up the many advantages of these schools when he said:

"There is a phase of military training for young men to which attention is especially invited and that is the benefit to the individual himself. He learns self-discipline, hygiene, self-confidence, and has an opportunity to develop qualities of leadership with an understanding of its responsibility. I would that every young man might have these advantages."

One of our patrons wrote recently: "We feel that the best thing we ever did for our boy was to send him to the Danville Military Institute."

ADVERTISERS MEET HOUSTON, TEX., NEXT

(By The Associated Press.)

LONDON, July 15—Houston Tex will be the scene of the 1925 international advertising convention This place was the unanimous choice of the board of club presidents at a meeting this evening and it will be given approval by the general meeting of the delegates on Thursday as it is the only city which will be placed before the convention

Lou Holland won the choice of the board for re-election as president of the associated advertising clubs of the world for the next year and Jess H Neal, was nominated for re-election as secretary-treasurer These nominations were made without opposition and will be placed before the convention for confirmation Thursday

There was no other city in the contest for the 1925 convention and no opposition was raised against according Houston the honor It was made unanimous by a motion proposed and seconded by the British delegation which last year won the honor for London, when Houston retired in London's favor.

Mrs Bernie eBlackwood of Chicago was elected chairman of the women's advertising clubs of the world at an executive session this afternoon and Mrs. Ethel B Schully, of Milwaukee, was chosen to represent the women's clubs on the executive board of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World

It is only left for the delegates to approve the action of the board and present minor plans for the next meeting The decision as to dates for the Houston meeting will be left to the executive board

MORNING STOCK LETTER

(Thomson & McKinnon)

NEW YORK, July 16.—The way the market has held has surprised me. It appeared to me that a reaction was due. For a while yesterday and on several days like it was coming but the reaction was feeble There is certainly sufficient reason for it We have a very unsatisfactory state of trade and some new trouble breaking out in the oil industry and values up at a pretty fair level compared to what we had only a short month ago. But I guess the market knows best and when it is time for a reaction it reacts The most interesting department is the railroad list Some years ago the leading railroad men and leading bankers saw the necessity of mergers but the politicians would not have it Now the merger idea is encouraged by law and I think that for the next couple years this will be a wonderful stimulant in the stock market I would continue to buy these regardless o fthe immediate turn in the industrials

RICH'D CROKER LEAVES ENTIRE ESTATE TO WIFE

Children of Former Tammany King Lose Another Step In Contest

(By The Associated Press.)

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., July 16.—Three children of Richard Croker, former Tammany chieftain, lost another step in their contest of his will when County Judge R. F. Robbins admitted to probate here yesterday, the will he made on October 12, 1919, at Glencairn, his estate in Dublin, Ireland, bequeathing to his widow, Mrs Bula E Croker, his entire estate, valued at $10,000,000.

Accepted as the last will and testament of the later political boss, it revokes all other such documents. The three children, Richard, Jr., Howard and Ethel, who have prosecuted a long court fight to overturn the will on grounds that Mrs Crower, his second wife, exerted undue influence over her husband in his later years and other charges, announced through their attorney that they would appeal the decision

Attached to the will was a codicil written by Croker, on November 16, of the same year to his wife requesting that she give his daughter, Florence, 10,000 [illegible] because she is the only one of [illegible] ving children that has ever [illegible] gratitude to me."

Mrs. Croker [illegible] take possession of any part of [illegible] state, save Croker's personal property here, valued at $5,000 ,until settlement of the case involving $110,000 in municipal bonds which were seized from a local bank vault last October as security for federal tax payments

Her attorneys said, however, that the way now is clear for her to apply for ancillary papers of administration to supersede the New York Trust Company as administrators of the estate.

The court action yesterday followed the sustaining ten days ago of Mrs. Croker's demurrer to objections filed by the three children to her, original petition for probate of July 8, 1922. During the litigation here, the will was sent to Dublin and admitted to probate there June 15, 1923.

Mrs Croker expects to qualify as sole executrix of the estate with the filing of temporary bond of $10,000 today. She plans to leave for New York City tonight and sail for Ireland July 19 with her mother

Talking Honey

By G. L. FURGURSON

(No. 8)

Bees are queer little beauties They not only gather nectar from the flowers and convert it into the purest and daintiest of sweets, but they make the beeswax that goes to make the honey comb Just as a hog or sheep eats grain and acummulates fat, so the bees, in the honey-producing season, when they wish to make honeycomb, gorge themselves with honey, and hang themselves inside the hive in a great mass until the surplus honey they have eaten is converted into wax instead of fat, and oozes our through the pores of the bees like perspiration and is gathered by their legs and fashioned into honeycomb. So you see the comb that you eat with comb honey is really pure honey and nothing else. There is nothing unhealthy or uncleanly about it, nor is it indigestible or inclined to hurt the weakest stomach.

The bees also gather substance from the buds of trees and plants called propolis, or bee glue. They never mix this with honey, but with it they fill up every crack and cranny in the hive to make it weather-proof.

In the production of comb honey, if the sections are left in the hive just a little time after they are filled and capped over, the bees smear the joints of the wood with bee glue in preparation for the coming winter. For neatness and appearance this has to be scraped off before the honey is marketed, though some slovenly beekeepers bring their honey to the stores just as it comes out of the hives.

Federals Claim Capture of Many Rebels In Latest Drive at Sao Paulo

(By The Associated Press.)

BUENOS Aires, July 16.—An official Brazilian communique from Rio Janeiro was received by La Nancion at midnight stating that the federals "won an important action against the rebels, capturing many prisoners."

The official bulletin announces that telegrams are continuing to arrive indicating that "patriotic battalions" have been organized in nearly all the cities of Sao Paulo state to battle the insurrectionists. It also states that intense feeling in other districts outside of Sao Paulo prevails against the rebels

REPORT IS DENIED

(By The Associated Press.)

BUENOS AIRES July 16.—A wireless message received from the German steamer General Belgrano today said the ship had received a radio communication from the Brazilian foreign office denying a report broadcast Monday by the British steamer Andes stating that the Sao Paulo insurrectionists had advanced to within eight miles of Santos

The [illegible] censorship imposed by the Brazilian government has prevented any authentic news coming out of that country recently concerning the revolutionary situation at Sao Paulo. Much concern is felt here and it is feared in some quarters that the revolt is much more serious than at first believed

Everyman's Investments

By GEORGE T. HUGHES

FORTY-FOURTH ARTICLE

The Lady Was Wrong.

A woman evidently untrained in financial affairs went into the office of a prominent investment banking house the other day and told the manager she had $10,000 in Liberty bonds on which she thought she was not receiving a high enough return. She said she wanted to sell these bonds and buy some other security. Under a little tactful questioning the investment banker found that the $10,000 represented her entire capital. He told her in the first place that there was nothing so good as a Liberty bond and urged her not to disturb her holdings. She would not listen to him, however, and so he made up for her a list of high-grade railroad mortgages and public utility bonds on which the average return was from 5 to 5 1-2 per cent With these she was no better satisfied. "Why I have been told," she said, "I could get 7 1-2 or 8 per cent with perfect security." Patiently the banker explained to her that the rule was the higher the return the greater the risk and that she was in no condition to take any risk at all. He didn't make much headway. As a last resort he asked her why she thought investors were willing to pay prices for good bonds so high that the return would be only 5 or 5 1-2 per cent. "Because they are fools," she replied and indignantly flounced out of the office The lady was wrong. It is not the fools who buy a high grade security but the wise. She doubtless found some less conscientious adviser who was willing to let her take chances with her small capital and probably to her sorrow. It is one of the mysteries of human nature that when people come to sell Liberty bonds in order to buy something else that will increase their income they want to jump at once from the safest investment in all the world to one which at best is more or less speculative. If you must make the change and it is not always inadvisable take something that does not make too violent a contrast. Five per cent. is a generous return on a high grade investment at this time.

NEW YORK STOCKS.

(By The Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, July 16.—Considerable irregularity developed at the opening of today's stock market Oils continued under pressure in further reflection of the spread of gasoline price cuts, Atlantic Refining dropping 2 points to a new 1924 low and most of the other active issues yielding fractionally on initial sales. Liggett and Myers and Interborough Rapid Transit, each touched new 1924 peak prices.

Reactionary tendencies predominated during the early trading although independent strength was shown by a few rails and public utilities Virginia Railway and Power dropped 2 1-4 points. Phillips Jones, Stewart Warner and American Water Works common two each and International Paper, Stromberg Carburetor, General Electric and U S. Cast Iron Pipe sold off a point or more.

Additional new 1924 highs were recorded by Omaha, Delaware and Hudson, Illinois Central, Wheeling and Lake Erie, common and preferred and Manhattan moderate guaranteed. Other strong spots included American Express, Pressed Steel Car, Union Tank Car and Goodyear Rubber preferred up 1 to 2 points Foreign exchanges opened steady.
